Guidance for the Accountancy Sector

This is draft guidance pending approval from HM Treasury

January 2020
INTRODUCTION

Accountants are key gatekeepers for the financial system, facilitating vital transactions that underpin the UK economy. As such, we have a significant role to play in ensuring our services are not used to further a criminal purpose. As professionals, accountants must act with integrity and uphold the law, and must not engage in criminal activity.

This guidance is based on the law and regulations as of 10 January 2020. Please note that some of the requirements of the regulations relating to EU lists are expected to fall away at the end of the transitional period. This guidance covers the prevention of money laundering and the countering of terrorist financing. It is intended to be read by anyone who provides audit, accountancy, tax advisory, insolvency, or trust and company services in the United Kingdom and has been approved and adopted by the UK accountancy AML supervisory bodies.

The guidance has been prepared jointly by the CCAB bodies:

Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales

1 ABOUT THIS GUIDANCE

• What is the purpose of this guidance?
• Who is the guidance for?
• What is the legal status of this guidance?

1.1 What is the purpose of this guidance?

1.1.1 This guidance has been prepared to help accountants (including tax advisers and insolvency practitioners) comply with their obligations under UK legislation to prevent, recognise and report money laundering. Compliance with it will ensure compliance with the relevant legislation (including that related to counter-terrorist financing) and professional requirements.

1.1.2 The term ‘must’ is used throughout to indicate a mandatory legal or regulatory requirement. If Businesses require assistance in interpretation of the UK anti-money laundering and terrorist financing (AML) regime, they should seek advice from their anti-money laundering supervisory authority or consider seeking legal advice. In all cases businesses should document and be able to justify their decision.

1.1.3 Where the law or regulations require no specific course of action, ‘should’ is used to indicate good practice sufficient to satisfy statutory and regulatory requirements. Businesses should consider their own particular circumstances when determining whether any such ‘good practice’ suggestions are indeed appropriate to them. Alternative practices can be used, but businesses must be able to explain their reasons to their anti-money laundering supervisory authority, including why they consider them compliant with law and regulation.

1.1.4 The UK anti-money laundering regime applies only to defined services carried out by designated businesses. This guidance assumes that many businesses will find it easier to apply certain AML processes and procedures to all of their services, but this is a decision for the business itself. It can be unnecessarily costly to apply anti-money laundering provisions to services that do not fall within the UK AML regime.

1.1.5 This guidance refers, in turn, to guidance issued by bodies other than CCAB. When those bodies revise or replace their guidance, the references in this document should be assumed to refer to the latest versions.

1.1.6 Businesses may use AML guidance issued by other trade and professional bodies, including the Joint Money Laundering Steering Group (JMLSG), where that guidance is better aligned with the specific circumstances faced by the business. Where the business relies on alternative guidance, it must be in a position to justify this reliance to their anti-money laundering supervisory authority. Businesses supervised by HMRC should also take into account its published content on GOV.UK.

1.1.7 The law which comprises the UK AML regime is contained in the following legislation and relevant amending statutory instruments valid as at the date of this guidance:

- The Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (POCA) as amended. Particular attention is drawn to the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 (SOCPA);
- The Money Laundering, Terrorist Financing and Transfer of Funds (Information on the Payer) Regulations 2017 (the 2017 Regulations) as amended. Particular attention is drawn to The Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing (Amendment) Regulations 2019)); Terrorist Asset-Freezing Act 2010;
- Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001;
- Counter-terrorism Act 2008, Schedule 7;

Businesses should ensure that they take account of all subsequent relevant amendments.

1.1.8 POCA and TA 2000 contain the offences that can be committed by individuals or organisations. The 2017 Regulations set out in detail the systems and controls that businesses must possess, as well as the related offences that can be committed by businesses and individuals within them by failing to comply with relevant requirements.

1.2 What is the scope of this guidance?

1.2.1 This guidance is addressed to businesses covered by Regulations 8(2)(c) and 8(2)(e) of the 2017 Regulations. This means anyone who, in the course of business in the UK, acts as:

- An auditor (Regulation 11(a));
- An external accountant (Regulation 11(c));
- An insolvency practitioner (Regulation 11(b));
- A tax adviser (Regulation 11(d)).
- A trust or company service provider (Regulation 12(2)).
For the purposes of this guidance the services listed above are collectively referred to as defined services. The scope of what would be considered carrying on business in the UK is broad and would include certain cross border business models where day to day management takes place from UK registered office or UK head office.

1.2.2 Regulation 11(c) of the 2017 Regulations defines an external accountant as someone who provides accountancy services to other persons by way of business. There is no definition given for the term accountancy services, however for the purposes of this guidance it includes any service which involves the recording, review, analysis, calculation or reporting of financial information, and which is provided under arrangements other than a contract of employment. If in doubt, Businesses should confirm with their anti-money laundering supervisory authority whether their activities require supervision under the 2017 Regulations.

1.2.3 Regulation 11(d) of the 2017 Regulations defines tax adviser to include both direct and indirect provision of material aid, assistance or advice on someone’s tax affairs. This includes any specific tax advice given to clients, including completing and submitting tax returns, advice on whether something is liable to tax, or advice on the amount of tax due.

1.2.4 Where a business is providing tax services through virtual or automated services the business is providing defined services. Businesses offering software or hardware solutions for accountancy, bookkeeping, payroll or tax are not providing a defined service provided they do not prepare or analyse any financial information themselves for their clients.

1.2.5 When considering a service or product involving software or hardware, a business should consider the quantity and nature of the human input that it may be required to supply as part of the service. For example, a business develops software that identifies a contractor’s IR35 status and calculates tax due.

- Situation 1: Business A licences the software to new and existing clients without any support services. Although the output of the software is tax related, business A is not providing a defined service.
- Situation 2: Business A licences the software to new and existing clients. The client has a right to call on Business A for advice on interpreting the output from the software. Business A is providing a defined service.
- Situation 3: In Situation 1, the client asks Business A for advice on the output under a separate engagement. This additional service provided by Business A is a defined service.
Similar considerations arise as in Situations 1, 2 and 3 where payroll services are provided.

1.2.6 A business may determine that not all the services it offers meets the definition of a defined service under the 2017 Regulations. In such cases, a business may decide that CDD measures do not need to be applied to clients seeking services that are not defined services. However, if a business decides not to apply CDD measures, it should document the rationale for its decision. Notwithstanding the fact that certain services may not meet the definition of a defined service, a business may choose to still apply CDD measures in such cases.

1.2.7 This guidance does not cover services other than those in 1.2.1, guidance for which may be available from other sources. Businesses supervised by HMRC that provide both accountancy services and trust or company services should generally follow this guidance but should also have regard to the HMRC guidance ‘Anti-money laundering guidance for trust or company services providers. Businesses solely providing trust or company services and supervised by HMRC should follow the HMRC guidance.

1.2.8 Guidance related to secondees and subcontractors can be found in APPENDIX A.
1.3 What is the legal status of this guidance?

1.3.1 This guidance has been approved by HM Treasury, and the UK courts must take account of its contents when deciding whether a business subject to it has contravened a relevant requirement under the 2017 Regulations, or committed an offence under Section 330-331 of POCA.

1.3.2 If an AML supervisory authority is called upon to judge whether a business has complied with its general ethical or regulatory requirements, it will take into account whether or not the business has applied the provisions of this guidance.

1.3.3 This guidance is not intended to be exhaustive. It cannot foresee every situation in which a business may find itself. If in doubt, seek appropriate advice or consult your AML supervisory authority.
2 MONEY LAUNDERING AND TERRORIST FINANCING

- What are the fundamentals?
- What are criminal property and terrorist property?
- What are the Primary Offences?
- What is the Failure to Report offence?
- What is the Tipping Off offence?
- What is the Prejudicing an Investigation offence?

2.1 What are the fundamentals?

2.1.1 Businesses need to assess and be alert to the risks posed by:
- Clients;
- Suppliers;
- Employees; and
- The customers, suppliers, employees and associates of clients.

2.1.2 Businesses must be aware of their reporting obligations. Neither the business nor its client needs to have been party to money laundering or terrorist financing for a reporting obligation to arise (see Chapter six of this guidance).

2.1.3 The UK’s MLTF regime covers two distinct areas: Money Laundering and Terrorist Finance. Each defines the meaning of “property” for the purposes of the regime (Criminal Property and Terrorist Property) and sets out prohibited conduct involving the property.

2.1.4 This chapter talks about Anti-Money Laundering and Counter-Terrorist Finance separately. In the rest of the guidance “money laundering” should be taken to include terrorist finance unless the wording specifically excludes it.

2.1.5 Crime is an action or inaction prohibited by law and punishable by the state. It is not civil wrongdoing for which restitution is owed to another person. Where a representative of the state (such as HMRC) can decide whether to treat conduct as a criminal or a civil matter, for the MLTF regime businesses should consider the conduct as criminal, even where the state’s decision is, frequently or even invariably, to treat it as civil.

2.1.6 The Proceeds of Crime Act relates to property which arises from any criminal activity whether carried out by the person in possession of the property or a third party.
2.1.7 The following diagram explains when conduct (inside or outside the UK) is terrorism, for the MLTF regime:

2.1.8 As set out above, the key elements of terrorism are a use or threat of action (which could include a cyber-attack) designed to influence a state (or international body) or to intimidate or terrorise the public for the purpose of advancing a cause.
2.2 What are criminal property and terrorist property?

2.2.1 The property may take any form, including:

- Money or money’s worth;
- Securities;
- A reduction in a liability; or
- Tangible or intangible assets.

2.2.2 There is no need for the property to be in the UK or pass through the UK. There are no materiality or de minimis exceptions.

2.2.3 Criminal property is any property that results from:

- Conduct in the UK that is criminal in the UK;
- Conduct overseas that would have been criminal had it taken place in any part of the UK.
- The UK takes an “all crimes” approach – including tax evasion and administrative offences.

2.2.4 Terrorist property is any property that is:

- likely to be used for terrorism,
- the proceeds of acts of terrorism, or
- the proceeds of acts carried out for terrorism.

2.2.5 Note that all the resources of organisations proscribed by TA 2000 are terrorist property.

2.2.6 It should be noted that, because terrorism and funding terrorism are illegal, terrorist property will also be criminal property. The fact that the property involved may be both criminal property and terrorist property does not create a dual reporting obligation. For example, the following are criminal acts that will normally also be terrorist offences if they relate to persons or organisations engaged in terrorism:

- Failure to comply with a prohibition imposed by a freezing order or enable any other person to contravene the freezing order; and
- Dealing with, or making available funds or economic resources which are owned, controlled by or benefitting a designated person (under the Office of Financial Sanctions Implementation List).
2.3 What are the Primary Offences?

2.3.1 The Primary Offences may be committed by any person, both those within the regulated sector and those outside.

2.3.2 The conduct that can amount to a Primary Offence may include:

- Taking an action (for example stealing a car);
- Refraining from taking an action (for example not conducting a mandatory environmental impact assessment);
- A single act (for example, possessing the proceeds of one’s own crime);
- Complex and sophisticated schemes involving multiple parties; or
- Multiple methods of handling and transferring property.

2.3.3 An individual or entity commits a Money Laundering offence if they:

- Conceal, disguise, convert or transfer criminal property (POCA 327),
- Acquire, use or possess criminal property (POCA 329);
- Are involved in an arrangement that allows another to acquire, retain, use or control criminal property (POCA 328);
- Remove criminal property from a UK jurisdiction (POCA 327). Note that the UK comprises three Jurisdictions: England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. It is an offence to move criminal property from one of these to another.

2.3.4 An individual or entity commits a Terrorist Financing offence if they:

- Raise, receive or provide terrorist property (TA 15);
- Use or possess terrorist property (TA 16);
- Are involved in an arrangement that:
  - makes terrorist property available (TA 17);
  - conceals terrorist property or transfers it to nominees (TA 18); or
  - removes terrorist property from a UK jurisdiction (TA 18). Note that the UK comprises three Jurisdictions: England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. It is an offence to move criminal property from one of these to another.
- Pay an insurance claim to reimburse property that has become terrorist property (TA 17A);
2.3.5 A defence is available to charges of money laundering if the persons involved did not know or suspect that they were dealing with criminal property and in the case of terrorist property if they did not intend or have reasonable grounds to suspect the property was to be or may be used for the purposes of terrorism.

2.3.6 It is possible to obtain a defence (POCA 338 and TA 21ZA) to charges of money laundering and terrorist finance. This defence is available where a disclosure is made of the conduct which would otherwise fall within POCA or TA and consent (either a DAML or DATF) is obtained to continue. In both Acts, the consent must be obtained before engaging in the conduct concerned (See 6.3).

2.3.7 The conditions for this defence differ between POCA and TA. In the case of TA the DATF must come from the National Crime Agency (NCA). In the case of POCA, if the person seeking a DAML is not the MLRO, the DAML can be provided by the MLRO (who should have first obtained a DAML directly from the NCA under the provisions of Section 338 of POCA).

2.3.8 It is not a money laundering offence (POCA 327, 328 and 329) if the conduct that gave rise to the criminal property:

- Is reasonably believed to have happened in a location outside the UK where it was legal, and
- It would have carried a maximum sentence of less than 12 months had it occurred in the UK. The requirements of this overseas conduct exception are complex, onerous and stringent; specialist legal advice may be needed.

Note that this exception does not apply to terrorist financing.

For further detail please see 6.1.10.

2.3.9 The maximum penalties for committing a Primary Offence are 14 years imprisonment or an unlimited fine or both (POCA 334 and TA 22).

2.4 What is the Failure to Report offence?

2.4.1 The Failure to Report offence (POCA 330 and TA 21A) applies only within the regulated sector. It occurs when a regulated person fails to report knowledge or suspicion of money laundering or terrorist finance.

2.4.2 Remember:

- There is no de minimis threshold value; and
• The anti-money laundering regime includes an overseas reporting exemption (see 6.1.10) but the counter-terrorism finance regime does not.

2.4.3 There are defences available for charges of failing to report both money laundering and terrorist finance if there is a reasonable excuse for not reporting promptly. Reasonable excuse may include the following:
• All the information that the person could provide to the NCA is already known to Law Enforcement because it is in the public domain or because it has already been reported by another person; or
• There is another reasonable excuse (this is likely to be defined fairly narrowly, in terms of personal safety or security).

2.4.4 For further information on this offence and the defences see Chapter Six of this guidance.

2.4.5 The maximum penalties for committing the Failure to Report offence are 5 years imprisonment or an unlimited fine or both (POCA 334 and TA 21A).

2.5 What is the Tipping Off offence?

2.5.1 The Tipping Off offence (POCA 333A and S331 and TA 21D) applies only within the regulated sector. This offence is committed when:
• a person in the regulated sector discloses that a SAR or DAML has been made;
• an investigation into allegations of MLTF is underway (or being contemplated); and
• the disclosure is likely to prejudice that investigation.

2.5.2 For further information, including defences to this offence see Chapter Six of this guidance.

2.5.3 The maximum penalties for committing the Failure to Report offence are 2 years imprisonment or an unlimited fine or both (POCA 333A and TA 21D).

2.6 What is the Prejudicing an Investigation offence?

2.6.1 The Prejudicing an Investigation offence (POCA 342 and TA 39) applies to both those within the regulated sector and those outside. Interference with material relevant to an investigation (including falsification, concealment or destruction of documents) can amount to an offence of prejudicing an investigation. For those outside the regime, revealing the existence of a law enforcement investigation can amount to an offence (for those within the regulated sector such conduct is likely to result in a tipping off offence, see 2.5 above)
2.6.2  There is a defence if:

- There was no suspicion that an investigation would be prejudiced;
- It was not known or suspected that the documents were relevant; and
- There was no intention to conceal facts.

2.6.3  The maximum penalties for committing the Prejudicing an investigation offence are 5 years imprisonment or an unlimited fine or both (POCA 342).
3 RESPONSIBILITY & OVERSIGHT

- What are the responsibilities of a business?
- How should sole practitioners implement these requirements?
- What are the responsibilities of senior management/MLRO?
- How might the MLRO role be split?
- What policies, procedures and controls are required?

3.1 What are the responsibilities of a business?

3.1.1 For businesses providing defined services, the 2017 Regulations require anti-money laundering systems and controls that meet the requirements of the UK anti-money laundering regime. The 2017 Regulations impose a duty to ensure that relevant employees and agents (see Chapter Eight of this guidance) are kept aware of these systems and controls and are trained to apply them properly. Businesses are explicitly required to:

- Monitor and manage their own compliance with the 2017 Regulations; and
- Make sure they are always familiar with the requirements of the 2017 Regulations to ensure continuing compliance.

3.1.2 If a business fails to meet its obligations under the 2017 Regulations, civil penalties or criminal sanctions can be imposed on the business and any individuals deemed responsible. This could include anyone in a senior position who neglected their own responsibilities or agreed to something that resulted in the compliance failure.

3.1.3 The primary money laundering offences defined under POCA (see 2.2 of this guidance) can be committed by anyone inside or outside the regulated sector but POCA imposes specific provisions on the regulated sector.

3.1.4 Businesses must have systems and controls capable of:

- assessing the risk associated with a client;
- performing CDD;
- ongoing monitoring of existing clients;
- keeping appropriate records;

and enabling staff to make an internal SAR to their MLRO.
3.1.5 Relevant employees and agents must have a level of training that is appropriate to their role, so that they understand their AML obligations.

3.1.6 The AML skills, knowledge, expertise, conduct and integrity of relevant employees must be assessed. This requirement does not extend to agents.

3.1.7 Effective internal risk management systems and controls must be established, and the relevant senior management responsibilities clearly defined.

HMRC Trust and Company Service Register

3.1.8 Businesses that are not on the trust and company service register are not permitted, under Regulation 56, to perform trust and company service work. Any business that performs trust and company service work when not on the register may be subject to disciplinary action, or civil or criminal sanctions imposed by HMRC.

3.1.9 HMRC must maintain a register of all relevant persons who are trust or company service providers (TCSPs) that are not already registered with the FCA.

3.1.10 Businesses that are a member of a professional body, will be registered by that body on the trust and company service register because HMRC has asked the professional body supervisors to notify them of all the firms they supervise that perform trust and company service work (including firms where the work is incidental to the accountancy services). The supervisory authority will send HMRC the name and address of each business and confirm they are ‘fit and proper’.

3.1.11 Businesses do not need to separately apply to HMRC but should contact their supervisory body if they are unsure whether they are on the register.

3.2 What does Regulation 26 require of beneficial owners, officers and managers (BOOMs)?

3.2.1 Regulation 26 requires each beneficial owner, officer and manager in a business to be approved by the supervisory authority of that business.

3.2.2 A business must take reasonable care to ensure that only persons approved by its supervisory body act as officers and managers of the business. This includes only appointing persons who are approved and when a person’s approval is withdrawn ensuring that the person ceases to act in any relevant role.

3.2.3 In order to obtain approval, each beneficial owner, officer or manager must apply to the supervisory authority. Businesses may wish to co-ordinate these applications. Each supervisory authority will have different application processes and the person making the application should familiarise themselves with the requirements. The beneficial owner, officer or manager should expect to submit evidence of their criminal record (e.g. a basic DBS certificate).

3.2.4 An approved beneficial owner, officer or manager who is subsequently convicted of a relevant offence (refer to Schedule 3 of the 2017 Regulations), must inform the supervisory authority within 30 days of the conviction date. The business must also inform the supervisory authority within 30 days of the date on which it became aware of the approved person’s conviction. Please note that the businesses’ supervisory authority may require notification in a shorter period so the business should familiarise themselves with the requirements.

Definitions – BOOMs

3.2.5 The following definitions apply to the terms Beneficial Owner, Officer and Manager for the purposes of Regulation 26.

Beneficial owner:
- a sole practitioner;
- a partner, or LLP member, in a firm who:
  - holds (directly or indirectly) more than 25% of the capital, or profits or voting rights; or
  - exercises ultimate control; and
- a shareholder in a limited company who:
  - holds (directly or indirectly) more than 25% of the shares or voting rights; or
  - ultimately owns or exercises ultimate control.

Officer:
- a sole practitioner;
- a partner in a partnership (including a Scottish Limited Partnership (SLP));
- a member in a limited liability partnership (LLP);
- a director or company secretary in a limited company; and
- a member of the firm’s management board or equivalent.

Manager:
- the nominated officer (the MLRO);
- the member of the board of directors (or if there is no board, of its equivalent management body) or of its senior management as the officer responsible for the firm’s compliance with MLR17; and
• any other principal, senior manager, or member of a management committee who is responsible for setting, approving or ensuring the firm’s compliance with the firm’s Anti-Money Laundering policies and procedures, in relation to the following areas:
  o client acceptance procedures;
  o the firm’s risk management practices;
  o internal controls, including employee screening and training for AML purposes;
  o internal audit or the annual AML compliance review process;
  o customer due diligence, including policies for reliance; and o AML record keeping.

3.3 What are the differences in requirements for sole practitioners?

3.3.1 Because it would not be appropriate to the size and nature of the business, a sole practitioner who has no relevant employees need not:
  • appoint a board member or member of senior management to be responsible for the business’ compliance with the UK anti-money laundering regime, as the sole practitioner will be held responsible as referred to in 3.3.4;
  • appoint a nominated officer because the sole practitioner will be responsible for submitting external reports to the NCA as referred to in 3.3.5;
  • establish an independent audit function for AML policies, controls and procedures as referred to in 3.5.26.

3.4 What are the responsibilities of Senior Management/MLRO?

3.4.1 The 2017 Regulations define senior management as: an officer or employee of the business with sufficient knowledge of the business’ MLTF risk exposure, and with sufficient authority, to take decisions affecting its risk exposure.

3.4.2 The 2017 Regulations require that the approval of Senior Management must be obtained:
  • for the policies, controls and procedures adopted by the business. (Regulation 19(2)(b));
  • before entering into or continuing a business relationship with a Politically Exposed Person (PEP), a family member of a PEP or a known close associate of a PEP (Regulation 35(5)(a)).
  • Before establishing or continuing a business relationship with, or carrying out an occasional transaction for, a person established in a high risk third country (Regulation 33(1)(b) and 33(3A) (e)).

3.4.3 Members of senior management undertaking such responsibilities should receive Continuing Professional Development (CPD) appropriate to their role.
3.4.4 Regulation 21(1)(a) of the 2017 Regulations requires that, where appropriate to the size and nature of the business, the business appoints a board member or member of senior management who must be responsible for the business’ compliance with the UK anti-money laundering regime. This individual should have:

- an understanding of the business, its service lines and its clients;
- sufficient seniority to direct the activities of all members of staff (including senior members of staff);
- the authority to ensure the business’ compliance with the regime;
- the time, capacity and resources to fulfil the role.

3.4.5 Regulation 21(3) of the 2017 Regulations requires a business to appoint a nominated officer. This individual should be responsible for receiving internal SARs and making external SARs to the NCA (as the UK’s FIU). This person should have:

- sufficient seniority to enforce their decisions;
- the authority to make external reports to the NCA without reference to another person;
- the time, capacity and resources to review internal SARs and make external SARs in a timely manner.

3.4.6 Within 14 days of the appointment of either the responsible board member/senior management and/or the nominated officer, the business’ anti-money laundering supervisory authority must be informed of the identity of the individual(s).

3.4.7 Depending on the size, complexity and structure of a business, these two roles may be combined in a single individual provided that person has sufficient seniority, authority, governance responsibility, time, capacity and resources to do both roles properly. This guidance primarily describes the situation in which one individual fulfils the combined role, referred to in this guidance as the MLRO, with alternative arrangements covered in 3.4 of this guidance. The role of the MLRO is not defined in legislation but has traditionally included responsibility for internal controls and risk management around MLTF, in accordance with sectoral guidance. Businesses with an MLRO should periodically review the MLRO’s brief to ensure that:

- it reflects current law, regulation, guidance, best practice and the experience of the business in relation to the effective management of MLTF risk; and
- the MLRO has the seniority, authority, governance responsibility, time, capacity and resources to fulfil the brief.
3.4.8 The business should ensure that there are sufficient resources to undertake the work associated with the MLRO’s role. This should cover normal working, planned and unplanned absences and seasonal or other peaks in work. Arrangements may include appointing deputies and delegates. When deciding upon the number and location of deputies and delegates, the business should have regard to the size and complexity of the business’ service lines and locations. Particular service lines or locations may benefit from a deputy or delegate with specialised knowledge or proximity. Where there are deputies, delegates or both (or when elements of business’ AML policies, controls and procedures are outsourced), the MLRO retains ultimate responsibility for the business’ compliance with the UK anti-money laundering regime.

3.4.9 All MLROs, deputies and delegates should undertake CPD appropriate to their roles.

3.4.10 The MLRO should:

- have oversight of, and be involved in, MLTF risk assessments;
- take reasonable steps to access any relevant information about the business;
- obtain and use national and international findings to inform their performance of their role;
- create and maintain the business’s risk-based approach to preventing MLTF;
- support and coordinate management’s focus on MLTF risks in each individual business area. This involves developing and implementing systems, controls, policies and procedures that are appropriate to each business area;
- take reasonable steps to ensure the creation and maintenance of MLTF documentation;
- develop Customer Due Diligence (CDD) policies and procedures;
- ensure the creation of the systems and controls needed to enable staff to make internal SARs in compliance with POCA;
- receive internal SARs and make external SARs to the NCA;
- take remedial action where controls are ineffective;
- draw attention to the areas in which systems and controls are effective and where improvements could be made;
- take reasonable steps to establish and maintain adequate arrangements for awareness and training;
- receive the findings of relevant audits and compliance reviews (both internal and external) and communicate these to the board (or equivalent managing body)
• report to the board (or equivalent managing body) at least annually, providing an assessment of the operations and effectiveness of the business’ AML systems and controls. This should take the form of a written report. These written reports should be supplemented with regular ad hoc meetings or comprehensive management information to keep senior management engaged with AML compliance and up to date with relevant national and international developments in AML, including new areas of risk and regulatory practice. The board (or equivalent managing body) should be able to demonstrate that it has given proper consideration to the reports and ad hoc briefings provided by the MLRO and then taken appropriate action to remedy any AML deficiencies highlighted.

3.5 How might the MLRO role be split?

3.5.1 Where the MLRO role as described above is split between two or more individuals, the allocation of the duties should be clear to the individuals assigned the duties, all relevant employees and the business’ anti-money laundering supervisory authority.

3.5.2 Businesses may use their discretion as to how to assign duties between two or more individuals, depending on the size, complexity and structure of their business (subject to the basic legal requirements described in this guidance).

3.5.3 The matters listed in 3.3.10 of this guidance should be allocated to these individuals or others with the appropriate skills, knowledge and expertise. Regardless of the allocation of these duties, the individual identified in 3.3.4 of this guidance is ultimately responsible for the business’ compliance with the UK anti-money laundering regime, including the actions of the nominated officer.

3.6 What policies, procedures and controls are required?

3.6.1 The 2017 Regulations place certain requirements on businesses regarding CDD (Part 3 of the regulations) and ‘record keeping, procedures and training’ (Part 2 Chapter 2 of the regulations). The following topics, all of which form part of the MLTF framework, need to be considered:

- risk based approach, risk assessment and management;
- CDD (including EDD and SDD);
- record keeping;
- internal control;
- ongoing monitoring;
- reporting procedures;
- compliance management;
- communication.
3.6.2 The 2017 Regulations provide different amounts of detail about the policies and procedures required in each area. Businesses must implement and document policies, controls and procedures that are proportionate to the size and nature of the business. These must be subject to regular review and update, and a written record of this exercise maintained.

3.6.3 Businesses with overseas subsidiaries or branches that are carrying out any of the activities listed in 1.2.1 of this guidance must establish group wide policies and procedures equivalent to those in the UK. If the law of the overseas territory does not permit this, then the business must inform its anti-money laundering supervisory authority and implement additional risk-based procedures. Steps taken to communicate policies, controls and procedures to the group must also be recorded.

3.6.4 When determining policies, controls and procedures, consideration must be given to data protection requirements and the safeguarding of client confidentiality. Under the 2017 Regulations a business must make data subjects aware of the data that will be collected about them and why the date is being collected. Businesses must not use the data that they have gathered for MLTF purposes for any other purpose unless they have obtained consent from the data subject to do so, or the use of the data is permitted under legislation. Note that the requirement is for permission by legislation not contract.

The data collected during CDD may include details of those who exercise day-to-day control, beneficial ownership and in the case of transactions, the nature, purpose and the parties involved. Where there is a need to share client data on a group-wide basis, businesses may wish to obtain appropriate internal or external advice on the data protection implications.

Risk assessment and management

3.6.5 Every business must have appropriate policies and procedures for assessing and managing MLTF risks. To focus resources on the areas of greatest risk, a risk-based approach must be adopted. It is the ultimate responsibility of the board member or member of senior management responsible for compliance to identify the risks and then develop risk-based procedures for taking on new clients. A risk assessment should be conducted at least annually, but with new and changing risks considered as and when they are identified. Information from the business’ AML supervisory authority should be considered. Further information on the risk-based approach, types and categories of risk can be found in Chapter four of this guidance.

Risks from client activity

3.6.6 Businesses are required to have in place policies and procedures to identify and scrutinise the activity in which the client is involved and in respect of which the business is providing services, in order to detect potential MLTF activity. Businesses should consider whether the activity is unduly complex, disproportionately large or lacking in commercial rationale.
Risks from new services, products, business practices or technologies

3.6.7 As part of their policies, controls and procedures, businesses must take into account the MLTF risk arising from the introduction of new services, products, business practices or new technologies.

3.6.8 If a business separates defined services from other services (see 1.2.6), it should initially consider whether the new offering is a defined service. Some services will not be defined services and would therefore fall outside the scope of the 2017 Regulations e.g. the sale of a publication or a generic software application.

3.6.9 Where the new service or product is a defined service, businesses should have procedures that require it to be assessed for MLTF vulnerability and included within the firm-wide risk assessment. In assessing vulnerabilities and risks, its characteristics (such as whether it enables anonymity of beneficial ownership or is accessible through non-face-to-face delivery channels) should be considered.

3.6.10 Businesses should also consider how introducing new business practices (including new technology) could increase the MLTF risk. Criminals will often try to expose and exploit system weaknesses to aid criminal activity. Such weaknesses may allow activities to be undertaken anonymously or may enable threshold detection levels to be circumvented, so that a high volume of transactions can be undertaken over a short period of time. Before introducing new ways of working, consideration should be given to whether new controls, policies or procedures are required to mitigate the MLTF risk e.g. the introduction of additional monitoring or review controls.

3.6.11 When a business introduces a new service or product, it will not have an understanding of how it will be used by the business’ clients. Therefore, for an initial period of use of the new product or service, the business should apply greater monitoring to the engagements so that it can detect any unidentified risks and amend its procedures as appropriate.

Customer Due Diligence (CDD)

3.6.12 Responsibility for developing CDD policies and procedures rests with the MLRO. These procedures should ensure that relevant employees are able to make informed decisions about whether or not to establish a business relationship or undertake an occasional transaction, in the light of the MLTF risks associated with the client and transaction. To ensure that the correct procedures are being followed, relevant employees must be made aware of their obligations under the 2017 Regulations and given appropriate training.
3.6.13 Many businesses already have procedures to help them avoid conflicts of interest and ensure they comply with professional requirements for independence. The requirements of the 2017 Regulations can either be integrated into these procedures, to form a consolidated approach to taking on a new client or addressed separately. For more on CDD see Chapter five of this guidance.

Outsourcing of CDD

3.6.14 Where a business chooses to outsource aspects of the CDD process (e.g. collecting documentary evidence of client identity) to a third party it should give consideration as to whether the risk of MLTF is increased as a result of the outsourcing. Where the potential risk of MLTF is increased, a business should ensure that appropriate systems and controls are put in place to mitigate the increased risk.

3.6.15 Regardless of any outsourcing arrangements, a business will remain responsible for ensuring that CDD is performed to a UK standard, including maintaining appropriate records even in cases where documents are collated by the third-party outsourcer.

3.6.16 There is no legal obligation for a third-party outsourcer to report knowledge or suspicion of MLTF to the business or for the business to put in place for reporting of knowledge or suspicion by the third-party outsourcer. If a relevant employee within the business acquires knowledge or suspicion based on information supplied by the third-party outsourcer, this must be reported in the normal way.

Reporting

3.6.17 Under POCA the reporting of knowledge or suspicion of money laundering is a legal requirement. It is the responsibility of the MLRO to develop and implement internal policies, procedures and systems that are able to satisfy the POCA reporting requirements. Those policies must set out clearly, (a) what is expected of an individual who becomes aware of, or suspects, money laundering, and (b) how they report their concerns to the MLRO. All relevant employees must be trained in these procedures.

More information on reporting suspicious activity can be found in Chapter six of this guidance.

Record keeping

3.6.18 All records created as part of the CDD process, including any non-engagement documents relating to the client relationship and ongoing monitoring of it, must be retained for five years after the relationship ends. All records related to an occasional transaction must be retained for five years after the transaction is completed. A disengagement letter could provide documentary evidence that a business relationship has terminated, as could other forms of communication such as an unambiguous email making it clear that the business does not wish to engage or is ceasing to act.
3.6.19 Senior management must ensure that the relevant employees are made aware of these retention policies and that they remain alert to the importance of following them. There is more information on record keeping in Chapter seven of this guidance.

Training and awareness

3.6.20 The 2017 Regulations require that all relevant employees and agents (such as contractors) are aware of the law relating to MLTF and the requirements of data protection and undertake regular training in how to recognise and deal with suspicious activity which may be related to MLTF. See Chapter Eight of this guidance for further details.

3.6.21 A business that fails to provide training for relevant employees (and agents where appropriate) could be in breach of the regulations and at risk of prosecution. It would also risk failing to comply with Section 330/331 of POCA, which requires Businesses in the regulated sector to disclose any suspicions of money laundering. Although Section 330 of POCA could provide a ‘reasonable excuse’ defence against a failure to disclose for the individual, the regulations are still likely to have been breached by the business because adequate training was not provided. For further information on training and awareness refer to Chapter eight of this guidance.

Employee screening

3.6.22 Businesses should consider the skills, knowledge, expertise, conduct and integrity of all relevant employees both before and during their appointment. This consideration should be proportionate to the employee’s role in the business and the MLTF risks they are likely to encounter. An employee is relevant if his or her work is relevant to compliance with the 2017 Regulations or is otherwise capable of contributing to the business’ identification, mitigation, prevention or detection of MLTF. Most businesses may already undertake such an assessment as part of their recruitment, appraisal, training, independence, fit and proper and compliance procedures. However, it is important that businesses have a mechanism for evidencing MLTF knowledge within such procedures for example, a test for which the results are recorded can evidence knowledge and expertise. Similarly, regular recorded ethics training can be useful in assessing integrity.

Monitoring policies and procedures

3.6.23 The MLRO and appropriate senior management should together monitor the effectiveness of policies, procedures and processes so that improvements can be made when inefficiencies are found. Risks should be monitored, and any changes must be reflected in changes to policies and procedures, keeping them up-to-date, in line with the risk assessment of the business. For more information, see Chapter four of this guidance.

3.6.24 In their efforts to improve AML policies, controls and procedures, and better understand where problems can arise, senior management should encourage relevant employees to provide feedback.
When changes are made to policies, procedures or processes these should be properly communicated to relevant employees and supported by appropriate training where necessary.

3.6.25 Businesses must introduce a system of regular, independent reviews to understand the adequacy and effectiveness of the MLTF systems and any weaknesses identified. Independent does not necessarily mean external, as some businesses will have internal functions (typically audit, compliance or quality functions) that can carry out the reviews. Any recommendations for improvement should be monitored. Existing monitoring programmes and their frequency can be extending to include AML. The reviews should be proportionate to the size and nature of the business. A sole practitioner with no relevant employees need not implement regular, independent reviews unless required by their UK AML supervisory authority.

3.6.26 As part of their improvement efforts the senior manager responsible for compliance and the MLRO should monitor publicly available information on best practice in dealing with MLTF risks. For example, thematic reviews by regulators can be useful ways to improve understanding of good and poor practice, while reports on particular enforcement actions can illuminate common areas of weakness in AML policies, controls and procedures.
4 RISK BASED APPROACH

- What is the role of the risk-based approach?
- What is the role of senior management?
- How should the risk analysis be designed?
- What is the risk profile of the business?
- How should procedures take account of the risk-based approach?
- What are the different types of risk?
- Why is documentation important?

4.1 What is the role of the risk-based approach?

4.1.1 The risk-based approach is fundamental to satisfying the FATF recommendations, the EU directive and the overall UK MLTF regime. It requires governments, supervisors and Businesses alike to analyse the MLTF risks they face and make proportionate responses to them. It is the foundation of any business’ AML policies, controls and procedures, particularly its CDD and staff training procedures.

4.1.2 The risk-based approach recognises that the risks posed by MLTF activity will not be the same in every case and so it allows the business to tailor its response in proportion to its perceptions of risk. The risk-based approach requires evidence-based decision-making to better target risks. No procedure will ever detect and prevent all MLTF, but a realistic analysis of actual risks enables a business to concentrate the greatest resources on the greatest threats.

4.1.3 The risk-based approach does not exempt low risk clients, services and situations from CDD or other risk mitigation procedures, however the appropriate level of CDD is likely to be less onerous than for those thought to present a higher level of risk.

4.1.4 This section provides guidance on the analyses the business will need to perform to properly underpin a risk-based approach. Guidance on applying the risk-based approach to particular AML procedures and controls can be found in the relevant Chapter of this guidance dedicated to those procedures.

4.2 What is the role of senior management?

4.2.1 Senior management is responsible for managing all the risks faced by the business, including MLTF risks. Senior managers should ensure that MLTF risks are analysed, and their nature and severity identified and assessed, in order to produce a risk profile for the business. Senior management should then act to mitigate those risks in proportion to the severity of the threats they pose.
4.2.2 Where a risk is identified, the business must design and implement appropriate procedures to manage it. The reasons for believing these procedures to be appropriate should be supported by evidence, documented and systems created to monitor effectiveness. A business’ risk-based approach should evolve in response to the findings of the systems monitoring the effectiveness of the AML policies, controls and procedures.

4.2.3 The risk analysis can be conducted by the MLRO but must be approved by senior management including the senior manager responsible for compliance (if a different person to the MLRO). This is likely to include formal ratification of the outcomes, including the resulting policies and procedures, but may also include close senior management involvement in some or all of the analysis itself.

4.2.4 The risk profile and operating environment of any business changes over time. The risk assessment must be refreshed regularly by periodic reviews, the frequency of which should reflect the MLTF risks faced and the stability or otherwise of the business environment. In addition, whenever senior management sees that events have affected MLTF risks, the risk assessment should also be refreshed by an event-driven review. A fresh assessment may require AML policies, controls and procedures to be amended, with consequential impacts upon, for example, the training programs for relevant employees and agents.

4.3 How should the risk assessment be designed?

4.3.1 The 2017 Regulations require the business to consider all MLTF risks to which it is exposed, including at least the risks presented by:

- Its clients
- The countries or geographic areas in which it operates
- Its products or services
- Its transactions (referred to here as engagements)
- *Its delivery channels."

4.3.2 One possible first step is to consider the MLTF risks faced by each different part of the business. The business may already have general risk analysis processes, and these could form the basis of its MLTF risk analysis.

4.3.3 When designing an analysis process the business should look not only at itself but at its clients and markets as well. Consider factors that lower risks as well as those that increase them; a client subject to an effective AML regime poses a lower risk than one not subject to such a regime.
Businesses should take into account the findings of the most recent UK National Risk Assessment, together with any guidance issued by the relevant anti-money laundering supervisory authority.

4.3.4 Total MLTF risks include the possibility that the business might:

- Be used to launder money (e.g. by holding criminal proceeds in a client money account or by becoming involved in an arrangement that disguises the beneficial ownership of criminal proceeds);
- Be used to facilitate MLTF by another person (e.g. by creating a corporate vehicle to be used for money laundering or by introducing a money launderer to another regulated entity);
- Suffer consequential legal, regulatory or reputational damage because a client (or one or more of its associates) is involved in money laundering.

4.3.5 Risks should be grouped into categories, such as ‘client’, ‘service’ and ‘geography’. Some risks will not easily fit under any one heading but that should not prevent them from being considered properly. Nor should a business judge overall risk simply by looking at individual risks in isolation. When two threats are combined, they can produce a total risk greater than the sum of the parts. A particular industry and a particular country may each be thought to pose only a moderate risk. But when they are brought together, perhaps by a particular client or transaction, then the combined risk could possibly be high. Businesses must not take a ‘tick-box’ approach to assessing MLTF risk in relation to any individual client but must, instead, take reasonable steps to assess all information relevant to its consideration of the risk.

4.4 What is the risk profile of the business?

4.4.1 A business with a relatively simple client base and a limited portfolio of services may have a simple risk profile. In which case, a single set of AML policies, controls and procedures may suffice right across its operations. On the other hand, many businesses will find that their risk analysis reveals quite different MLTF risks in different aspects of the business. Accountancy services, for example, may face significantly different risks to insolvency, bankruptcy and recovery services. A risk analysis allows resources to be targeted, and procedures tailored, to address those differences properly.

4.4.2 When a business decides to have different procedures in different parts of its operations, it should consider how to deal with clients whose needs straddle departments or functions, such as:

- A new client who is to be served by two or more parts of the business with different AML policies, controls and procedures;
- An existing client who is to receive new services from a part of the business with its own distinct AML policies, controls and procedures.
4.4.3 The risk-based approach can also take into account the business’ experience and knowledge of different commercial environments. If, for example, it has no experience of a particular country, it could treat it as a normal or high risk even though other Businesses might consider it low risk. Similarly, if it expects to deal with only UK individuals and entities, it may treat as high risk any client associated with a non-UK country.

4.5 How should procedures take account of the risk-based approach?

4.5.1 Before establishing a client, relationship or accepting an engagement a business must have controls in place to address the risks arising from it. The risk profile of the business should show where particular risks are likely to arise, and so where certain procedures will be needed to tackle them.

4.5.2 Risk based approach procedures should be easy to understand and easy to use for all relevant employees who will need them. Sufficient flexibility should be built in to allow the procedures to identify, and adapt to, unusual situations.

4.5.3 The nature and extent of AML policies, controls and procedures depend on:

- The nature, scale, complexity and diversity of the business;
- The geographical spread of client operations, including any local AML regimes that apply; and
- The extent to which operations are linked to other organisations (such as networking businesses or agencies).

4.5.4 Businesses should have different client risk categories such as: low, normal, and high. The procedures used for each category should be suitable for the risks typically found in that category. For example, if it is normal for a business to deal with clients from a particular country, the business’ procedures for what they regard as normal clients must be designed to address the risks associated with that country. Some low and high-risk indicators can be found in APPENDIX D.

4.5.5 Regardless of the risk categorisation, businesses must undertake monitoring of the client relationship. Such monitoring must be done on a risk-based approach, with levels of monitoring varying depending on the MLTF risk associated with individual clients.

4.5.6 Taking into account key risk categories, a business may be able to draw up a simple matrix in order to determine a client’s risk profile. Such risk categories may include a client’s legal form, the country in which the client is established or incorporated, and the industry sector in which the client operates. In addition, businesses should also consider the nature of the service being offered to a client and the channels through which the services/transactions are being delivered.
4.5.7 Elevated risks could be mitigated by:

- Conducting enhanced levels of due diligence – i.e., increasing the level of CDD that is gathered.
- Carrying out periodic CDD reviews on a more frequent basis.
- Putting additional controls around particular service offerings or clients.

4.6 What are the different types of risk?

What is client risk?

4.6.1 A business should consider the following question, “Do our clients or its beneficial owners have attributes known to be frequently used by money launderers or terrorist financiers?”

4.6.2 Client risk is the overall MLTF risk posed by a client based on the key risk categories, as determined by a business.

4.6.3 The client’s risk profile may also inform the extent of the checks that need to be performed on other associated parties, such as the client’s beneficial owners.

4.6.4 Undue client secrecy and unnecessarily complex ownership structures can both point to heightened risk because company structures that disguise ownership and control are particularly attractive to people involved in MLTF.

4.6.5 In cases where a client (an individual) or beneficial owner of a client is identified as a PEP, an enhanced level of due diligence must be performed on the PEP. Further details on the approach to be taken in such circumstances are set out in 5.3.11 - 5.3.23 of this guidance.

4.6.6 A business should consider the following question “Do our clients have substantial operations in sectors that are favoured by money launderers or terrorist financiers?”

4.6.7 Sector risks are the risks associated with certain sectors that are more likely to be exposed to increased levels of MLTF. For example, the cryptocurrency sector has been subject to misuse by money launderers.

4.6.8 Businesses should consider the sectors in which their client has significant operations and take this into account when determining a client’s risk profile. When considering what constitutes a high-risk sector, Businesses should take into account the findings of the most recent UK National Risk Assessment, together with any guidance issued by the relevant anti-money laundering supervisory authority.
What is service risk?

4.6.9 A business should consider the following questions “Do any of our products or services have attributes known to be used by money launderers or terrorist financiers?” Does the nature and type of the engagements the business provides advice on have an inherently higher risk of MLTF?

4.6.10 Service risk is the perceived risk that certain products or services present an increased level of vulnerability to being used for MLTF purposes.

4.6.11 Businesses should consider carrying out additional checks when providing a product or service that has an increased level of MLTF vulnerability.

4.6.12 Services and products in which there is a serious risk that the business itself could commit a money laundering offence should also be treated as higher risk. For example, wherever the business may commit an offence under Section 327 – 329 of POCA. (See Chapter Two.)

4.6.13 Before a business begins to offer a service significantly different from its existing range of products or services, or when a client selects a new service from the business, it should assess the associated MLTF risks and respond appropriately to any new or increased risks.

What is geographic risk?

4.6.14 A business should consider the following question “Are our clients established in countries that are known to be used by money launderers or terrorist financiers?”

4.6.15 Geographic risk is the increased level of risk that a country poses in respect of MLTF.

4.6.16 When determining geographic risk, factors to consider may include the perceived level of corruption, criminal activity, and the effectiveness of MLTF controls within the country.

4.6.17 Businesses should make use of publicly available information when assessing the levels of MLTF of a particular country, e.g. information published by civil society organisations such as Transparency International and public assessments of the MLTF framework of individual countries (such as FATF mutual evaluations). When appropriate authorities designate a list of high risk third countries a link will be provided.

4.6.18 Although some countries may carry a higher level of MLTF risk, those businesses that have extensive experience within a given country may reach a geographical risk classification that differs to those that that only have a limited exposure.
What is delivery channel risk?

4.6.19 A business should consider the following question “Does the fact that I am not dealing with the client face to face pose a greater MLTF risk?”

4.6.20 Certain delivery channels can increase the MLTF risk, because they can make it more difficult to determine the identity and credibility of a client, both at the start of a business relationship and during its course.

4.6.21 For example, delivery channel risk could be increased where services/products are provided to clients who have not been met face-to-face, or where a business relationship with a client is conducted through an intermediary.

4.6.22 Businesses should consider the risks posed by a given delivery channel when determining the risk profile of a client, and whether an increased level of CDD needs to be performed.

4.7 Why is documentation important?

4.7.1 Businesses must be able to demonstrate to their anti-money laundering supervisory authority how they assess and seek to mitigate MLTF risks. This assessment must be documented and made available to the anti-money laundering supervisory authority on request. The documentation should demonstrate how the risk assessment informs their policies and procedures.
5 CUSTOMER DUE DILIGENCE (CDD)

- What is the purpose of CDD?
- When should CDD be carried out?
- How should CDD be applied?
- What happens if CDD cannot be completed?
- What is the obligation to report discrepancies in the Persons with Significant Control register and Trust Registration Service?

5.1 What is the purpose of CDD?

5.1.1 Criminals often seek to mask their true identity by using complex and opaque ownership structures. The purpose of CDD is to know and understand a client’s identity and business activities so that any MLTF risks can be properly managed. Effective CDD is, therefore, a key part of AML defences. By knowing the identity of a client, including who owns and controls it, a business not only fulfils its legal and regulatory requirements it equips itself to make informed decisions about the client’s standing and acceptability.

5.1.2 CDD also helps a business to construct a better understanding of the client’s typical business activities. By understanding what is normal practice it is easier to detect abnormal events, which, in turn, may point to MLTF activity.

CDD principles

5.1.3 Businesses must apply CDD procedures:

(a) at the start of a new business relationship (including a company formation),
(b) at appropriate points during the lifetime of the relationship,
(c) when an occasional transaction is to be undertaken,
(d) when there is either knowledge or a suspicion of MLTF, (Where there is such knowledge or suspicion of MLTF the business must also consider whether an external SAR should be made to the NCA.),
(e) when there is any doubt about the reliability of the identity information, or documents obtained previously for verification purposes,
(f) when the business has a legal duty to contact a client and the duty includes a requirement to review information related to the ownership or control structure of the client or any beneficial owners.
(g) when the business has a duty to exchange information under the Common Reporting Standard. It would be unusual for an accountancy business to have this reporting obligation as it applies more generally to asset managers and financial institutions who hold accounts on behalf of a client.

5.1.4 The 2017 Regulations outline the required components of good CDD. These components are:

- Identifying the client (i.e., knowing who the client is);
- Verifying the identity of the client (i.e., demonstrating that they are who they claim to be) by obtaining documents or other information from independent and reliable sources;
- Identifying beneficial owner(s) so that the ownership and control structure can be understood and the identities of any individuals who are the owners or controllers can be known;
- On a risk-sensitive basis, taking reasonable measures to verify the identity of the beneficial owner(s); and
- Gathering information on the intended purpose and nature of the business relationship.

5.1.5 When determining the degree of CDD to apply, the business must adopt a risk based approach, taking into account the type of client, business relationship, product or transaction, and ensuring that the appropriate emphasis is given to those areas that pose a higher level of risk (see Chapter four of this guidance). For this reason it is important that risks are assessed at the outset of a business relationship so that a proportionate degree of CDD can be brought to bear.

5.1.6 Where the work to be performed falls within the scope of defined services, the business must ensure that CDD is applied to new and existing clients alike. For existing clients, CDD information gathered previously should be reviewed and updated where it is necessary, timely and risk-appropriate to do so.

5.1.7 While the 2017 Regulations prescribe the level of CDD that should be applied in certain situations (i.e. simplified or enhanced – for more on this see 5.3 of this guidance), they do not describe how to do this on a risk-sensitive basis. Nonetheless, a business is expected to be able to demonstrate to its anti-money laundering supervisory authority that the measures it applied were appropriate in accordance with its own risk assessment. Chapter four of this guidance outlines broadly the key areas to be considered when developing a risk-based approach including (amongst other factors) the purpose, regularity and duration of the business relationship.
5.1.8 The arrows in the diagram above represent feedback loops by which an initial risk assessment or verification may highlight a need for more information to be gathered or a fresh risk assessment performed.

5.1.9 The identification phase requires the gathering of information about a client’s identity and the purpose of the intended business relationship. Appropriate identification information for an individual would include full name, date of birth and residential address. This can be collected from a range of sources, including the client. In the case of corporates and other organisations, identification also extends to establishing the identity of anyone who ultimately owns or controls the client. These people are the Beneficial Owners (BOs), and further detail on how to deal with them can be found in 5.1.14 of this guidance. Where an individual is believed to be acting on behalf of another person, that person should also be identified.

5.1.10 The next stage of CDD is risk assessment. This should be performed in accordance with the risk based approach guidance contained in Chapter four of this guidance, and must reflect the purpose, regularity and duration of the business relationship, as well as the size of transactions to be undertaken by the client and the business’ own risk assessment. An initial risk assessment is based on the information gathered during stage one (identification), but this may prompt the gathering of additional information as indicated by the left-hand feedback loop. The right-hand feedback loop shows that additional risk assessment may be required in the light of stage three (verification).

5.1.11 During identification and risk assessment, the business might consider the following questions:

- Are you clear why the client has selected you to carry out the service? E.g. Has the client asked you to assist in a service which is outside your normal area of specialism? While it is relevant to consider whether the client approached you, or you sought out the work, the client’s reason for awarding you the work must still be considered.

- Has the client asked to engage with you in an unusual manner? E.g. in a way that could obscure the true business activity or the true beneficiaries or controllers of the activity.
- Does the transaction align to the client’s normal business activities or planned strategy? E.g. the client is involved in a transaction for which they have little or no expertise.
- Does the transaction make commercial sense to all parties? E.g. there is no clear economic or legal purpose for the transaction.
- Is the identity of the other parties to the transaction clear? E.g.
  - The client is unclear as to the identity of the other parties to the transaction,
  - Intermediaries may be being used to obscure beneficial ownership.
- The other parties to the transactions are based in jurisdictions known to have weak corporate governance.
- Have you been deliberately asked to work on both sides of a client transaction, giving rise to an ethical wall which could act as a barrier for information sharing?
- Is there a lack of documentation in support of the transaction?
- Does the client transaction involve an unusual payment method which could be used to facilitate anonymity? E.g. large cash payments or electronic currency.
- Are any of the funds in the client transaction coming from a jurisdiction known to have links to MLTF?
- Could the client transaction be linked to a series of transactions, each of which has a value less than 15,000 Euros? E.g. payments are deliberately made under the occasional transaction threshold in order to avoid scrutiny.
- Does this client transaction make sense in the context of the other work the business has done with the client?

5.1.12 Businesses should remain vigilant throughout the duration of their involvement in the service in order to identify circumstances that require a report of suspicion of MLTF activity.

5.1.13 Once an initial risk assessment has been carried out, evidence is required to verify the identity information gathered during the first stage. This is called client verification. Verification involves validating (with an independent, authoritative source), that the identity is genuine and belongs to the claimed individual or entity. For an individual, verification may require sight of a passport (with a photocopy taken). For corporates and others, in addition to the client itself, reasonable verification measures for any individual beneficial owners (BOs) must also be considered on a risk sensitive basis.

5.1.14 Further guidance on the type of information that should be gathered and the documents that can be used to verify it, can be found in Appendix B of this guidance.

Beneficial ownership

Definition

5.1.15 A beneficial owner can only be a natural person i.e., a human being, as distinct from a legal person e.g. a company.

5.1.16 Regulations 5 and 6 of the 2017 Regulations defines the meaning of ‘beneficial owner’ for a range of different client types. The table below gives a summary of how beneficial ownership could be established for a variety of entities. In many cases, judgements will have to be made (for example, over effective control of an entity). Some of these judgements will be finely balanced. For this reason, businesses should document all decisions and the bases on which they are formed. Please see APPENDIX E for illustrative case studies for each of these client types.

Other beneficial owners

The Business must keep written records of all the actions it has taken to identify the BOs. The Business should consider whether it is appropriate to:

a. Decline or cease to act (see 5.4.8) or
b. File a SAR (see chapter 6), or
c. Both.

If the business is satisfied that it can continue to act, the Business must:

- take reasonable steps to verify the identity of the senior person in the body corporate responsible for managing it, and keep written records of:
  1. all the actions the Business has taken to verify the identity of the senior person; and
  2. any difficulties that the Business has encountered in verifying the identity of the senior person.

5.1.17 Businesses, in accordance with their legal obligations, need to be diligent in their enquiries about beneficial ownership, taking into account that the information they need may not always be readily available from public sources. A flexible approach to information gathering will be needed as it will often involve direct enquiries with clients and their advisers as well as searches of public records in the UK and overseas. There may be situations in which someone is considered to be the beneficial owner by virtue of control even though their ownership share is less than 25%.

Determining BOs in respect of complex structures

5.1.18 In many situations determining beneficial ownership is a straightforward matter. Cases in which the client is part of a complex structure will need to be looked at more closely. The diagrams in APPENDIX E illustrate types of structures, including indirect ownership and aggregation, which should be taken into account when determining beneficial ownership.

5.2 When should CDD be carried out?

When establishing a business relationship

5.2.1 CDD should normally be completed before entering into a business relationship or undertaking an occasional transaction. For guidance on the situation when CDD cannot be performed before the commencement of a business relationship, see 5.4 of this guidance.
5.2.2 A business relationship is defined by the 2017 Regulations (Regulation 4) as:

‘A business, professional or commercial relationship between a relevant (i.e. regulated) person and a customer, which arises out of the business of the relevant person and is expected by the relevant person, at the time when contact is established, to have an element of duration.’

Thus generic advice, provided with no expectation of any client follow-up or continuing relationship (such as generic reports provided free of charge or available for purchase by anyone), is unlikely to constitute a business relationship, although may potentially be an occasional transaction.

5.2.3 An occasional transaction is one not carried out as part of a business relationship. Under Regulation 27 (2) of the 2017 Regulations, CDD must be applied to an occasional transaction with a value of €15,000 or more (accumulating the value of linked transactions). Occasional transactions are not common in accountancy services, but should it occur then the business must carry out CDD in addition to (a) understand why the client requires the service, (b) consider any other parties involved, and (c) establish whether or not there is any potential for MLTF. If the client returns for another transaction the business should consider whether this establishes an ongoing relationship.

5.2.4 CDD procedures must also be carried out at certain other times (see 5.1.3), such as when there is a suspicion of MLTF, or where there are doubts about the available identity information, perhaps following a change in ownership/control or through the participation of a PEP (see 5.3.11 of this guidance).

Ongoing monitoring of the client relationship

5.2.5 Established business relationships should be subject to CDD procedures throughout their duration. This ongoing monitoring involves the scrutiny of client activities (including enquiries into sources of funds if necessary) to make sure they are consistent with the business’ knowledge and understanding of the client and its operations, and the associated risks.

Event-driven reviews

5.2.6 Businesses need to make sure that documentation, data and information obtained for CDD purposes is kept up to date. Events prompting a CDD information update must include:

- a change in the client’s identity
- a change in beneficial ownership of the client
- a change in the service provided to the client
- information that is inconsistent with the business’ knowledge of the client
• there is knowledge, suspicion or cause for concern (for example where you doubt the veracity of information provided). If a SAR has been made, care must also be taken to avoid making any disclosures which could constitute tipping off.

An event driven review may also be triggered by:

• the start of a new engagement;
• planning for recurring engagements;
• a previously stalled engagement restarting;
• a significant change to key office holders;
• the participation of a PEP (see 5.3.11 of this guidance)
• a significant change in the client’s business activity (this would include new operations in new countries); and

Periodic reviews

5.2.7 Businesses should use routine periodic reviews to update their CDD. The frequency of up-dating should be risk based, making use of the business’ risk assessment covered in Chapter 4 of this guidance, and reflecting the business’ knowledge of the client and any changes in its circumstances or the services it requires.

Ongoing procedures

5.2.8 The CDD procedures required for either event-driven or periodic reviews may not be the same as when first establishing a new business relationship. Given how much existing information could already be held, ongoing CDD may require the collection of less new information than was required at the very outset.

5.3 How should CDD be applied?

Applying CDD by taking a risk-based approach

5.3.1 Regulation 28(12) of the 2017 Regulations requires adequate CDD measures to reflect the business’ risk assessment (Chapter four of this guidance). This is important not only to ensure that there is good depth of knowledge in higher risk cases but also to avoid disproportionate effort in lower or normal risk cases and to minimise inconvenience for a potential client. No system of checks will ever detect and prevent all MLTF, but a risk-sensitive approach of this kind will provide a realistic assessment of the risks. A non-exhaustive list of risk factors can be found in APPENDIX D.
5.3.2 Extensive information on how to apply CDD in this way is contained in the guidance on risk-sensitive client verification provided by the JMLSG, which considers a wide range of entity types. For information on the more frequently encountered entity types see APPENDIX E.

Simplified due diligence (SDD)

5.3.3 SDD can be applied when a client is low risk, in accordance with the businesses’ risk assessment criteria.

5.3.4 CDD measures are still required but the extent and timing may be adjusted to reflect the assessment of low risk, for example in determining what constitutes reasonable verification measures. Ongoing monitoring for unusual or suspicious transactions is still required.

5.3.5 The business’ internal procedures should set out clearly what constitutes reasonable grounds for a client to qualify for SDD and must take into account at least the risk factors in APPENDIX D and relevant information made available by its anti-money laundering supervisory authority.

5.3.6 In any case, when a client or potential client has been subjected to SDD, and a suspicion of MLTF arises nonetheless, the SDD provisions must be set aside and the appropriate due diligence procedures applied instead (with due regard given to any risk of tipping off).

Enhanced due diligence (EDD)

5.3.7 A risk-based approach to CDD will identify situations in which there is a higher risk of MLTF. The regulations specify that ‘enhanced’ due diligence (Regulation 33 of the 2017 Regulations) must be applied in the following situations:

- where there is a high risk of MLTF;
- in any occasional transaction or business relationship with a person established in a high-risk third country;
- in relation to an occasional transaction or business relationship where either the client or another of the parties to the transaction are established in a high-risk third country. This would predominantly apply to services other than accountancy apart from where the business is handling client money or client assets;
- if a business has determined that a client or potential client is a PEP, or a family member or known close associate of a PEP;
- in any case where a client has provided false or stolen identification documentation or information on establishing a business relationship;
• in any case where a transaction is complex or unusually large, or there is an unusual pattern of transactions which have no apparent economic or legal purpose;
• in any other case which by its nature can present a higher risk of MLTF.

5.3.8 The business’ internal procedures should set out clearly what constitutes reasonable grounds for a client to qualify for EDD and must take into account at least the high-risk factors in APPENDIX D.

5.3.9 EDD procedures must include:
• as far as reasonably possible, examining the background and purpose of the engagement; and
• Increasing the degree and nature of monitoring of the business relationship in which the transaction is made to determine whether that transaction or that relationship appear to be suspicious.
• For clients that are higher risk due to connections to a high-risk third country o Obtaining additional information on the customer and its ultimate beneficial owners o Obtaining additional information on the intended nature of the business relationship o obtaining information on the source of wealth and source of funds of the customer and the customer’s beneficial owner o where there is a transaction, obtaining information on the reasons for the transactions o obtaining the approval of senior management for establishing or continuing the business relationship o Increasing the monitoring of the business relationship, by increasing the number and timings of controls applied.

5.3.10 EDD measures (as detailed in Regulation 33 (5) of the 2017 Regulations) may also include one or more of the following measures:
• seeking additional independent, reliable sources to verify information, including identity information, provided to the business;
• taking additional measures to understand better the background, ownership and financial situation of the client, and other parties relevant to the engagement; taking further steps to be satisfied that the transaction is consistent with the purpose and intended nature of the business relationship;

- Increasing the monitoring of the business relationship, including greater scrutiny of transactions.

Politically exposed person (PEP)

5.3.11 As set out above, the 2017 Regulations specify that PEPs (as well as certain family members and known close associates) must undergo EDD. Those who are entrusted with public functions often have power over public funds and the awarding of public contracts. They should not because of their high profile be held to a lower level of scrutiny than other individuals. The nature, and extent of, such EDD measures must vary depending on the extent of any heightened MLTF risk associated with individual PEPs. Businesses must treat PEPs on a case-by-case basis and apply EDD on the basis of their assessment of the MLTF risk associated with any individual PEPs.

5.3.12 Appropriate risk management systems and procedures should be put in place to determine whether potential clients (or their beneficial owners) are PEPs, or family members/knowclose associates of a PEP. Businesses should consider the risk factors of the country in which the PEP has a prominent public function. PEPs from countries with low levels of corruption; strong state institutions; and credible anti-money laundering defences are likely to pose less of an MLTF risk than PEPs from higher-risk countries.

5.3.13 An individual identified as a PEP solely because of their public function in the UK must still be treated as a PEP. However, if the business is not aware of any factors that would place the individual in a higher risk category, the individual may be categorised as a low risk PEP. Regulation 18 of the 2017 Regulations and the risk factors guidance produced by the European Supervisory Authorities set out factors that might point to potential higher risk. Such factors might also include, for example:

- known involvement in publicised scandals e.g., regarding expenses;
- undeclared business interests;
- the acceptance of inducements to influence policy.

5.3.14 In lower-risk situations a business should apply less onerous EDD requirements (such as, for example, making fewer enquiries of a PEP’s family members or known close associates; and taking less intrusive and less exhaustive steps to establish the sources of wealth/funds of PEPs). Conversely, and in higher-risk situations, Businesses should apply more stringent EDD measures. This represents part of the risk-based approach that businesses should take to MLTF compliance, as described more fully elsewhere in this guidance.
5.3.15 Businesses must treat individuals as PEPs for at least 12 months after they cease to hold a prominent public function. This requirement does not apply to family members or known close associates. Family members and known close associates of PEPs may be treated as ordinary clients (and subject only to CDD obligations) from the point that the PEP ceases to discharge a prominent public function. Businesses should only apply EDD measures to PEPs for more than 12 months after they have ceased to hold a prominent public function when the business has determined that they present a higher risk of MLTF.

5.3.16 To establish whether someone is a family member or known close associate of a PEP, businesses are expected to refer only to information that is either in the public domain or already in their possession. The 2017 Regulations provide that the definition of a family member must include the spouses/civil partners of PEPs, the children of PEPs (and their spouse or civil partner) and the parents of PEPs. This is not an exhaustive list – in determining whether other family members should be subject to EDD, businesses should consider the levels of MLTF risk associated with the relevant PEP. In lower-risk situations, a business need not apply EDD to additional family members other than those contained within the definition set out in the 2017 Regulations.

5.3.17 The 2017 Regulations state that only directors, deputy directors and board members (or equivalent) of international organisations should be treated as PEPs. Middle-ranking and junior officials do not fall within the definition of a PEP.

5.3.18 From January 2020, all EU jurisdictions are required to publish a list of positions that would make someone a PEP in their country. The list of UK functions is included in Regulation 35 (14) of the amended 2017 Regulations.

5.3.19 Since the term ‘international organisation’ is not defined by the 2017 Regulations, careful consideration should be given to the type, reputation and constitution of a body before excluding its representatives from EDD. Bodies such as the United Nations and NATO can confidently be considered to fall within the definition. The context of the engagement and role of the PEP in respect of it should also be considered. The regulations are clear that only directors, deputy directors and board members (or equivalent) of international organisations should be treated as PEPs.

5.3.20 Businesses are required to use risk-sensitive measures to help them recognise PEPs. This can be as simple as asking the client themselves or searching the internet for public information relating to the PEP. Businesses likely to provide services regularly to PEPs should consider subscribing to a specialist database. Businesses that use such databases must understand how they are populated and will need to ensure that those flagged by the database fall within the definition of a PEP, family member or known close associate as set out by the 2017 Regulations. During the life of a relationship, and to the extent that it is practical, attempts should be made to keep abreast of developments that could transform an existing client into a PEP.

5.3.21 Businesses wanting to enter into, or continue, a business relationship with a PEP must carry out EDD, which includes:

- senior management approval for the relationship;
- adequate measures to establish sources of wealth and funds; and
- enhanced monitoring of the ongoing relationship.

As set out above, the nature and extent of EDD measures must vary depending on the levels of MLTF risk associated with individual PEPs.

5.3.22 The Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) has published detailed guidance on how businesses that it supervises for MLTF purposes should identify and treat PEPs. Businesses may find this guidance useful in determining the approach that they should take to identifying and applying EDD to PEPs.

5.3.23 Recital 33 of the EU Directive (which the 2017 Regulations bring into UK law) makes it clear that refusing a business relationship with a person solely on the basis that they are a PEP is a contrary to the spirit and letter of the EU Directive, and of the FATF standards. Businesses must instead mitigate and manage any identified MLTF risks and should refuse business relationships only when such risk assessments indicate that they cannot effectively mitigate and manage these risks.

Financial sanctions and other prohibited relationships

5.3.24 Businesses must comply with any sanctions, embargos or restrictions in respect of any person or state to which the UN, UK or EU has decided to apply such measures (a list is published by HM Treasury). Businesses may be directed to not enter into business relationships, carry out occasional transactions or proceed with any arrangements already in progress, and have an obligation to report sanctions breaches to HM Treasury’s Office of Financial Sanctions Implementation (OFSI) (separately to the making of an external SAR to the NCA, where appropriate). Depending on the circumstances, sanctions imposed by overseas countries may also apply to UK businesses.

5.3.25 Financial sanctions can be a complex and changeable area. Detailed discussion of it is beyond the scope of this guidance. Businesses should make use of the guidance published by OFSI. OFSI also offer a free e-alerts service to help businesses stay up-to-date with developments in financial sanctions. Businesses should note that 2017 Regulations set out specific reporting obligations for certain businesses, including external accountants, auditors, and tax advisers. A business that fails to comply with its reporting obligations will be committing an offence, which may result in a criminal prosecution or a monetary penalty. For further information on the reporting obligations refer to the OFSI guide to financial sanctions. Businesses unsure of their legal obligations should seek legal advice.

5.4 Can reliance be placed on other parties?

5.4.1 Businesses are permitted to rely on certain other parties (subject to their agreement) to complete all or part of CDD.

5.4.2 This is permitted only if the other party is a member of the regulated sector in the UK, or subject, in an EEA or non-EEA state, to an equivalent regulatory regime which includes compliance supervision requirements equivalent to the EU Directive.

5.4.3 Businesses should note that where one party places reliance on another they must enter into an agreement (that should be in writing) to ensure that the other party will provide the CDD documentation immediately on request. An arrangement of this kind can be useful and efficient when the two parties are able to build a relationship of trust, but it should not be entered into lightly. Liability for inadequate CDD remains with the relying party. Businesses placing reliance on another should satisfy themselves with the level of CDD being undertaken.

Parties seeking reliance

5.4.4 A business relying on a third party in this way is not required to apply standard CDD, but it must still carry out a risk assessment and perform ongoing monitoring. That means it should still obtain a sufficient quantity and quality of CDD information to enable it to meet its monitoring obligations.

5.4.5 In addition, the business seeking to rely on a third party remains liable for any CDD failings irrespective of the terms of the CDD agreement.

5.4.6 If relying on a third party, businesses must obtain copies of all relevant information to satisfy CDD requirements. They should also enter into a written arrangement that confirms that the party being relied on will provide copies of identification and verification documentation immediately on request.

Parties granting reliance

5.4.7 A business should consider whether it wishes to be relied upon to perform CDD for another party. Before granting consent, a business that is relied upon must ensure that its client (and any other third party whose information would be disclosed) is aware that the disclosure may be made to the other party and has no objection to the disclosure. It should make sure that:

- it has adequate systems for keeping proper CDD records;
- it can make available immediately on request:
- any information about the client/BO gathered during CDD; and/or
- copies of any information provided during client/BO identity/verification or documentation obtained during CDD.

- It can keep those CDD records securely for five years after the end of the business relationship.

Group engagements

5.4.8 When a relevant business contracts with a group of companies that are under the control of a parent undertaking, all of which could be considered clients, it may wish to consider applying CDD in a proportionate, risk-sensitive way by treating the group as a single entity.

Subcontracting

5.4.9 Where a relevant business, A, is engaged by another business, B, to help with work for one of its clients or some other underlying party, C, then A should consider whether its client is in fact B, not C. For example, where there is no business relationship formed, nor is there an engagement letter between A and C, it may be that CDD on C is not required but should instead be completed for B.

5.4.10 On the other hand, where there is significant contact with the underlying party, or where a business relationship with it is believed to have been established, then C may also be deemed a client and CDD may be required for both C and B. In this situation, A may wish to take into account information provided by B and the relationship it has with C when determining what CDD is required under its risk-based approach. It should be noted that the same considerations are relevant in networked arrangements, where work is referred between member firms.

Evidence gathering

5.4.11 The 2017 Regulations do not prescribe what information sources a business should consult to perform CDD effectively. There are many possibilities, including direct discussions with the client and collecting information from its websites, brochures and reports, as well as public domain sources. It is particularly important to make sure that the client is who they say they are. Since the purpose of client verification is to check the client identity information already gathered, it is important that the information used at this stage is drawn from independent sources and any identity evidence used should be from an authoritative source.

5.4.12 In higher risk cases businesses must consider whether they need to take extra steps to increase the depth of their CDD knowledge. These might include more extensive internet and media searches covering the client, key counterparties, the business sectors and countries and requests for additional identity evidence. Subscription databases can be a quick way to access this kind of public domain information, and they will often reveal links to known associates (companies and individuals) as well.

5.4.13 Client verification means to verify on the basis of documents or information obtained from a reliable source which is independent of the person whose identity is being verified. Documents issued or made available by an official body can be regarded as being independent.

5.4.14 It is important that verification procedures are undertaken on a risk-sensitive basis. Refer to APPENDIX B for a non-exhaustive list of documents that can be used for verification purposes. Further help can be found in the JMLSG guidance.

Copies of documents

Certification

5.4.15 Businesses should consider how they will demonstrate the provenance of document copies. When the original was seen by a relevant employee it should be sufficient for that person to endorse the copy to that effect, including the date on which it was seen. When the copy originates from outside the business, the standing of the person who certified it should be considered and relevant employees should be aware of the risks associated with certified copies (for example, that such documents may be falsified). It may be necessary to stipulate acceptable sources for certified copies; for example, businesses may decide to restrict acceptance to those persons in the permitted categories for reliance (see 5.3.27 of this guidance).

Annotation

5.4.16 Where a document is not an original but could be mistaken for one, it should be annotated to that effect. This is particularly true for documents sourced from the internet, such as downloads from Companies House, from the website of a regulator, stock exchange or government department, or from any other suitable source. Documents of this kind should carry an indication of the source and when the download took place – sometimes in the automatic page footers/headers – and these would satisfy this requirement. Where necessary and taking a risk-based approach, such documents (whether downloaded or otherwise) should be validated with an authoritative source such as a government agency.

Use of electronic data

5.4.17 Businesses may choose to use electronic identification processes either on their own or in conjunction with other paper-based evidence, on a risk-based approach. A number of subscription services, many of them online, give access to identity-related information. A broad variety of electronic verification systems exist, including those drawing on multiple sources, those relying on the self-capture of documentation using an interactive application, and those that provide credentials which confirm a third party has validated the ID. Companies House registers of persons of significant control may be used but may not be relied upon in the absence of other supporting evidence.

5.4.18 Before using any electronic service, firms should ensure they understand the basis of the systems they use and question whether the information is reliable, comprehensive and accurate. The process should be secure from fraud and misuse and capable of providing an appropriate level of assurance that the person claiming a particular identity is in fact the person with that identity, to a degree that is necessary for effectively managing and mitigating any risks of money laundering and terrorist financing. Consider the following:

- Does the system draw on multiple sources? A single source (e.g., the electoral register) is not usually sufficient unless there are additional controls to validate the information. A system that combines negative and positive data sources is generally more robust.

- Are the sources checked and reviewed regularly? Systems that do not update their data regularly are generally more prone to inaccuracy.

- Are there control mechanisms to ensure data quality and reliability? Systems should have built-in data integrity checks which, ideally, are sufficiently transparent to prove their effectiveness.

- Is the information accessible? It should be possible to either download and store search results in electronic form or print a hardcopy that contains all the details required (name of provider, original source, date, etc.). It is sufficient to have a record of the issuer of a document and its unique identifier, it is not necessary to have a reproduction of the original document.

- Does the system provide adequate evidence that the client is who they claim to be? Consideration should be given as to whether the evidence provided by the system has been obtained from an official source, e.g., certificate of incorporation from the official company registry, or passport.

5.5 What happens if CDD cannot be completed?

When delays occur

5.5.1 The business should still gather enough information to form a general understanding of the client’s identity so that it remains possible to assess the risk of MLTF.

5.5.2 The 2017 Regulations do recognise that CDD will sometimes need to be completed while the business relationship is established, rather than before. But delays of this kind are only permissible when there is little risk of MLTF and it is necessary to avoid interrupting the normal conduct of business. Such exceptions will be rare (see 5.4.6 of this guidance and the CCAB guidance on completion of CDD during urgent work).

5.5.3 When most of the information needed has been collected before the business relationship has begun, it may be acceptable to have a short extension (to allow for information collection to be completed) provided the cause of the delay is administrative or logistical, not the client’s reluctance to cooperate. To ensure the reasons are valid, and should not give rise to suspicions of MLTF, it is recommended that each extension be considered individually and agreed by the MLRO.

5.5.4 Extensions to the CDD schedule should be specific, well-defined and time-limited. There should be no granting of general extensions (such as for particular client types).

5.5.5 No client engagement (including transfers of client money or assets) should be completed until CDD has been completed in accordance with the business’ own procedures.

5.5.6 Provided that CDD is completed as soon as practicable, verification procedures may be completed during the establishment of a business relationship if it is necessary not to interrupt the normal course of business and there is little risk of MLTF. In some situations, it may be necessary to carry out CDD while commencing work because it is urgent. Such situations could include:

- some insolvency appointments;
- appointments that involve ascertaining the client’s legal position or defending them in legal proceedings;
- response to an urgent cyber incident; or
- when it is critically important to preserve or extract data or other assets without delay.

5.5.7 It is recommended that these categories are considered carefully and defined by the MLRO to ensure that the reasons for any extension are appropriate.

5.5.8 The principles underlying the examples above are that there must be a pressing or urgent need for the services which is caused by external factors not within the client’s control.

5.5.9 Further examples may include a request for an urgent review of cash flows and business funding to determine whether a bank will continue to fund a client; an urgent requirement to negotiate a “time to pay” arrangement with HMRC; or circumstances where there could be an adverse impact on the client business which could lead to job losses or an adverse impact on vulnerable individuals.
5.5.10 Commercial deadlines alone would not meet the test, nor would an audit deadline or normal deadline to prepare and file accounts unless there were very unusual circumstances.

5.5.11 The business must still gather enough information to form a general understanding of the client’s identity so that it remains possible to assess the risk of MLTF. Any electronic checks available to the firm should be completed as should open source checks (e.g. a search of Companies’ House).

5.5.12 Since the CDD is to be performed whilst establishing a business relationship, it should be complete by the time the final work is provided to the client.

5.5.13 Where a firm decides to extend the circumstances in which it will apply Regulation 30(3) each request should be considered and approved by the MLRO, or an appropriate deputy.

Cessation of work and suspicious activity reporting

5.5.14 If a prospective or existing client refuses to provide CDD information, the work must not proceed and any existing relationship with the client must be terminated. This can be a particular problem where an insolvency practitioner cannot resign. Insolvency Practitioners should refer to the appendix to this guidance that deals with the requirements for insolvency work. Consideration must also be given to whether or not a SAR should be submitted to the NCA under POCA or TA 2000 (see Chapter six of this guidance).

5.6 What are the obligations to report discrepancies in the People with Significant Control register?

5.6.1 Before establishing a business relationship, with a UK company, unregistered company, LLP or Scottish limited partnership, a business must obtain proof of their client’s registration on the People with Significant Control ("PSC") register, or an excerpt of the register.

5.6.2 From 10 March 2022 a business establishing a business relationship with a trust must obtain proof of the trust’s registration on the Trust Registration Service ("TRS") if the trust is required to be registered.

5.6.3 If a business identifies a discrepancy between the information that they gather while carrying out their duties under the 2017 Regulations (during client take on processes), and the information that is on the PSC register or TRS, the business must report that discrepancy to Companies House or HMRC as applicable.

5.6.4 A person named on the PSC register may not be the person the business identifies as a beneficial owner under CDD procedures, due to different definitions for a PSC and a beneficial owner.
What constitutes a discrepancy?

5.6.5 The purpose behind PSC discrepancy reporting is to ensure that the information on the PSC register is adequate, accurate and current. “Discrepancy” is not defined in the 2017 Regulations but HM Government’s interpretation of the intention is for material differences to be reported. For further information (including what constitutes a material discrepancy) see the Companies House guidance.

When should a discrepancy be reported?

5.6.6 A discrepancy must be reported as soon as reasonably practicable after the discrepancy is discovered, which would normally be within 30 days of identifying the discrepancy. Bulk reporting on a periodic basis is not permitted.

5.6.7 Businesses do not have to wait for a response from Companies House or HMRC before taking on their clients. The decision as to whether to establish a business relationship with that entity is up to the business, based on their usual risk-based approach. Businesses should assess the relevance of any discrepancies within their CDD process. In particular if it appears the discrepancy is intentional, the business should consider the veracity of other information received from the client.

5.6.8 Discrepancies only have to be reported when establishing a new business relationship. Businesses do not have to review the records of existing clients, or report during CDD refreshes.

5.6.9 A discrepancy report is not a substitute for a SAR but finding a discrepancy does not in itself require a regulated firm to submit a SAR. The normal tests for when a SAR is required still apply—see Chapter 6 for more details.

Time lags in updating the registers

5.6.10 Companies House will investigate the discrepancy report and, in most cases, contact the company. If the information on the register is incorrect, Companies House can use a new power which allows them to remove incorrect information. They will expect the company to update the register and will undertake compliance action if this doesn’t happen.

5.6.11 If a business identifies a discrepancy on the PSC register or TRS and the client corrects the discrepancy within a reasonable period, which would usually be 30 days of the business identifying the discrepancy, the business does not need to make a report to Companies House or HMRC if they are satisfied that the PSC register or TRS is now correct. This is on the basis that no material error would exist. Similarly, if there is a change in ownership of a client, a discrepancy between the PSC register and the information the business has collected is only reportable if the client does not update the PSC details within the permitted time period for doing so.
Do overseas branches and subsidiaries have to report discrepancies on UK entities they are taking on?

5.6.12 Overseas branches and subsidiaries must abide by equivalent overseas regulations to the 2017 Regulations. As it is likely there will be no appropriate equivalent in the case of taking on UK entities, discrepancies should still be reported to Companies House or HMRC.

5.6.13 In instances where multiple branches or subsidiaries of the same group are taking on the same client at the same time, if feasible, the group may file one report as soon as is reasonably possible, rather than several (from each subsidiary).

How do you report a discrepancy?

5.6.14 The Companies House guidance details how to report a discrepancy. Businesses should keep records of any reports that are made to Companies House or HMRC for a period of five years.
6 SUSPICIOUS ACTIVITY REPORTING

- What must be reported?
- What is the Failure to Report Offence?
- What is the Tipping Off Offence?
- What is the Prejudicing an Investigation Offence?
- When and how should an external SAR be made to the NCA?
- What is a DAML and why is it important?
- What should happen after an external SAR has been made?

6.1 What must be reported?

The reporting regime

6.1.1 Businesses must have internal reporting procedures that enable relevant employees and agents to disclose their knowledge or suspicions of MLTF. A nominated officer must be appointed to receive these disclosures (this guidance assumes that this role will be filled by the MLRO). In the regulated sector it is an offence for someone who knows or suspects that MLTF has taken place (or has reasonable grounds) not to report their concerns to their MLRO (or, in exceptional circumstances, straight to the NCA).

6.1.2 The MLRO has a duty to consider all such internal SARs. If the MLRO also suspects MLTF then an external SAR must be made to the NCA. Typically, the MLRO’s knowledge or suspicions will arise (directly or indirectly) out of the internal SARs they receive.

6.1.3 Similar ‘failure to disclose’ provisions are found in the TA 2000.

6.1.4 Businesses should be aware that a SAR may be about persons other than clients. The key elements required for a SAR (suspicion, crime, proceeds) are set out below.

Suspicion

6.1.5 There is very little guidance on what constitutes ‘suspicion’ so the concept remains subjective. Suspicion does not require document-based evidence, it may be a particular fact pattern, a series of red flags or general observations that cause concern. Some pointers can be found in case law, where the following observations have been made. Suspicion is:

- a state of mind more definite than speculation but falling short of evidence-based knowledge;
• a positive feeling of actual apprehension or mistrust;

• an opinion with some foundation.

Suspicion is not:

• a mere idle wondering;

• a vague feeling of unease.

6.1.6 A SAR must be made where there is knowledge or suspicion of money laundering, but businesses must not make SARs based on speculation. For example:

• A suspicion is formed that someone has failed to declare all their income for the last tax year, to assume that they had done the same thing in previous years would be speculation in the absence of specific supporting information; however businesses should take appropriate risk management procedures if these suspicions elevate the risk of the client.

• The purchase of a brand-new Ferrari by a client’s financial controller is not, in itself, suspicious activity. However, inconsistencies in accounts for which the financial controller is responsible could raise speculation to the level of suspicion.

6.1.7 A SAR is also required when there are ‘reasonable grounds’ to know or suspect MLTF. This is an objective test, i.e., the standard of behaviour expected of a reasonable person in the same position. Claims of ignorance or naivety are no defence.

6.1.8 It is important for individuals to make enquiries that would reasonably be expected of someone with their qualifications, experience and expertise, provided the enquiries fall within the normal scope of the engagement or business relationship. In other words, they should exercise a healthy level of professional scepticism and judgement and, if unsure about what to do, consult their MLRO (or similar) in accordance with the business’ own procedures. If in doubt, err on the side of caution and report to the MLRO.

The information or knowledge that gave rise to the suspicions should have come to the individual in the course of providing defined services.

Crime

6.1.9 Criminal conduct is behaviour which constitutes a criminal offence in the UK or, if it happened overseas, would have been an offence had it taken place in any part of the UK.

6.1.10 There is an overseas conduct exception, set out in Section 330 (7A) of POCA. This provides a defence against a charge of failure to report where:

• the conduct is reasonably believed to have taken place overseas; and it was lawful where it took place; and the maximum sentence had it happened in the UK would be less than 12 months.

(For offences under the Gaming Act 1968, the Lotteries and Amusements Act 1976 and Section 23 or 25 of the FSMA 2000 the exemption still applies even if the UK sentence is more than 12 months.)

Because these tests are complex and burdensome, MLROs may wish to seek legal advice to resolve any doubts.

6.1.11 There is no similar overseas conduct exemption for reporting suspicions of terrorist financing.

6.1.12 In most cases of suspicious activity, the reporter will have a particular type of criminal conduct in mind, but this is not always the case. Some transactions or activities so lack a commercial rationale or business purpose that they give rise to a suspicion of MLTF. UK law defines money laundering widely; any criminal conduct that results in criminal property is classified as money laundering. Individuals are not required to become experts in the wide range of criminal offences that lead to money laundering, but they are expected to recognise any that fall within the scope of their work and exercise professional scepticism and judgement at all times.

6.1.13 An innocent error or mistake would not normally give rise to criminal proceeds (unless a strict liability offence). If a client is known or believed to have acted in error, they should have the situation explained to them. They must then promptly bring their conduct within the law to avoid committing a money laundering offence. Where there is uncertainty because certain legal issues lie outside the competence of the practitioner, the client should be referred to an appropriate specialist or legal professional.

Proceeds / criminal property

6.1.14 Criminal proceeds can take many forms. Cost savings (as a result of tax evasion or ignoring legal requirements) and other less obvious benefits can be proceeds of crime. Where criminal property is used to acquire more assets, these too become criminal property. It is important to note that there is no question of a de minimis value.

6.1.15 If someone knowingly engages in criminal activity with no benefit, then they may have committed some offence other than money laundering (it will often be fraud) and there is no obligation to make a SAR. Businesses should nonetheless consider whether they are under some other professional reporting obligations.

A checklist for the SAR reporting process can be found in APPENDIX C.
6.2 What is the Failure to Report Offence?

6.2.1 Individuals should make sure that any information in their possession which is part of the required disclosure is passed to the MLRO as soon as practicably possible.

6.2.2 Where, as a result of an internal SAR, the MLRO obtains knowledge or forms a suspicion of MLTF, they must as soon as practicable make an external SAR to the NCA. The MLRO may commit a POCA Section 331 offence if they fail to do so.

Failure to disclose: defences and exemptions

6.2.3 There are some defences against failure to disclose:

- Overseas conduct (see 6.1.10)
- Privileged circumstances exemption applies (see 6.2.21 to 6.2.25);
- The relevant employee or agent concerned did not know about or suspect MLTF and had not received the training required by Regulation 24 of the 2017 Regulations. As no training was provided, the relevant employee or agent is not bound by the objective test – i.e., to always report when there are ‘reasonable grounds’ for knowledge or suspicion – but the business has committed an offence by failing to provide training.

Reasonable excuse defence

6.2.4 Reasonable excuse has not been defined by the courts and is not likely to apply in most cases. Circumstances which may provide a reasonable excuse for not reporting suspicions of money laundering include for example:

- If the reporter is under duress or there is a threat to their safety,
- If it is clear that a law enforcement authority (in the UK) is already aware of all the relevant information that the business holds, or all the relevant information is entirely in the public domain.

This is not intended to be an exhaustive list. Moreover, reporters should be aware that it will ultimately be for a court to decide if a reporters’ excuse for not making an authorised disclosure report under section 330 was a reasonable excuse. Reporters should clearly document their reasons for concluding that they have a reasonable excuse in any given case and, if in doubt, may wish to seek independent legal advice.
6.3 What is the Tipping Off Offence?

6.3.1 This offence is committed when:

- a person in the regulated sector discloses that a SAR or DAML has been made;
- an investigation into allegations of MLTF is underway (or being contemplated); and
- the disclosure is likely to prejudice that investigation.

6.3.2 Considerable care must be taken when communicating with clients or third parties after any form of SAR has been made. Before disclosing any of the matters reported it is important to consider carefully whether to do so is likely to constitute an offence of tipping off or prejudicing an investigation (see 6.3 and 6.4 of this guidance). It is suggested that businesses keep records of these deliberations and the conclusions reached (see Chapter Seven of this guidance).

6.3.3 No tipping off offence is committed under Section 333A of POCA, if the relevant person did not know or suspect that their disclosure was likely to prejudice any subsequent investigation.

6.3.4 There are a number of exceptions to this prohibition on disclosing the existence of a SAR or a current or subsequent investigation. A person does not commit an offence if they make a disclosure:

- to a fellow relevant employee of the same undertaking; or
- to a relevant professional adviser in a different undertaking if both people are located in either an EEA state or a state with equivalent anti-money laundering requirements, and both undertakings share common ownership, management or control; or
- to an anti-money laundering supervisory authority as defined by the 2017 Regulations; or
- for the purposes of the prevention, investigation or prosecution of a criminal offence in the UK or elsewhere, or an investigation under POCA, or the enforcement of any court order under POCA; or
- following notification that the moratorium period for a consent SAR has been extended beyond 31 days, to the subject of the report (provided the content of the SAR is not disclosed). Businesses may wish to seek legal advice.

6.3.5 An offence is not committed if a relevant professional adviser makes a disclosure to another within the same profession (e.g. accountancy) but from a different business, who is of the same professional standing (including with respect to their duties of professional confidentiality and protection of personal data), when that disclosure:

- relates to a single client or former client of both advisers; and involves client activity or the provision of a service that involves both of them; and

• is made only for the purpose of preventing a money laundering offence; and

• is made to a person in an EU member state or a state imposing equivalent MLTF requirements.

Despite these exceptions, the existence of a SAR or DAML should not be disclosed without good reason.

6.3.6 No tipping off offence is committed if a person attempts to dissuade their client from conduct amounting to an offence. No tipping off offence is committed when enquiries are made of a client regarding something that properly falls within the normal scope of the engagement or business relationship. For example, if a business discovers an invoice that has not been included on a client’s tax return, then the client should be asked about it.

6.3.7 Although normal commercial enquiries (perhaps to understand a particular transaction) would not generally lead to tipping off, care is required, nonetheless. Continuing work may require that matters relating to the suspicions be discussed with the client’s senior management. This may be of particular importance in audit relationships. Enquiries should be confined to what is required by the ordinary course of business. No attempt should be made to investigate matters unless to do so is within the scope of the professional work commissioned. It is important to avoid making accusations or suggesting that anyone is guilty of an offence.

6.3.8 Persons concerned about tipping off may wish to consult their MLRO. In particular, it is important that documents containing references to the subject matter of any SAR is not released to third parties without first consulting the MLRO and, in extreme cases, law enforcement. Examples of such documents include:

• public audit or other attestation reports;

• public reports to regulators;

• confidential reports to regulators (e.g., to the FCA under certain auditing standards);

• provision of information to sponsors or other statements in connection with rule 2.12 of the UK’s stock exchange listing rules;

• reports under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986;

• reports under s218 of the Insolvency Act 1986;

• Companies Act statements on auditor resignations;

• professional clearance/etiquette letters;

• communications to clients of an intention to resign.
6.3.9 MLROs sometimes need advice when formulating instructions to the wider business. Recourse can be made to the helplines and support services provided by the professional bodies. Legal advice can be sought from a suitably skilled and knowledgeable professional legal adviser. Discussion with the NCA and law enforcement may also be valuable but bear in mind that they cannot provide advice and they are not entitled to dictate the conduct of a professional relationship.

6.3.10 Businesses are reminded of the requirement to revisit CDD when a suspicion of MLTF arises, see chapter 5.

6.4 What is the Prejudicing an Investigation Offence?

6.4.1 Revealing the existence of a law enforcement investigation, even if the business has not submitted a SAR, can lead to an offence of prejudicing an investigation. There is a defence if the person who made the disclosure did not know or suspect that it would be prejudicial, or did not know or suspect the documents to be relevant, or did not intend to conceal any facts from the person carrying out the investigation.

6.4.2 Falsification, concealment or destruction of documents relevant to an investigation (or causing the same) can also fall within this offence. Again, there is a defence if it was not known or suspected that the documents were relevant, or there was no intention to conceal facts.

6.5 When and how should an external SAR be made to the NCA?

Is a report required?

6.5.1 The following paragraphs refer to relevant employees. While not specifically mentioned in the 2017 regulations, businesses may wish to apply these provisions to their agents. The business should have policies and procedures that specify their expectations of agents, particularly where the agents do not have their own reporting procedures.

6.5.2 There are no hard and fast rules for recognising MLTF. It is important for everyone to remain alert to the risks and to apply their professional judgement, experience and scepticism.

6.5.3 Relevant employees must ask themselves whether something they have observed in the course of business has the characteristics of MLTF and, therefore, warrants a SAR. Most businesses include in their standard anti-money laundering systems and controls to enable relevant employees to discuss, with suitable people, whether their concerns amount to reportable knowledge or suspicion. Relevant employees should take advantage of these arrangements.
6.5.4 Once there is the requisite knowledge or suspicion, or reasonable grounds for either, then the relevant employee must submit an internal SAR to their MLRO promptly (or, in exceptional circumstances, straight to the NCA).

6.5.5 Deciding whether or not something is suspicious may require further enquiries to be made with the client or their records (all within the normal scope of the assignment or business relationship). The UK anti-money laundering regime does not prohibit normal commercial enquiries to fulfil client duties, and these may help establish whether or not something is properly a cause for suspicion.

6.5.6 Investigations into suspected MLTF should not be conducted unless to do so would be within the scope of the engagement. Any information sought should be in keeping with the normal conduct of business. Normal business activities should continue (subject to the business’s consideration of the risks involved), with any information or other matters that flow from included in a SAR. To perform additional investigations is not only unnecessary, it is undesirable since it would risk tipping off a money launderer.

6.5.7 Relevant employees may wish to consider the following questions to assist their decision.

Should I submit a report to the MLRO?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Step</th>
<th>Question</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| 1    | • Do I have knowledge or suspicion of criminal activity? or
      • Am I aware of an activity so unusual or lacking in normal commercial rationale that it causes a suspicion of MLTF? |
| 2    | • Do I know or suspect that a benefit arose from the activity in 1? |
| 3    | • Do I think that someone involved in the activity, or in possession of the proceeds of that activity, knew or suspected that it was criminal? |
| 4    | • Can I identify the person (or persons) in possession of the benefit? or
      • Do I know the location of the benefit? or
      • Do I have information that will help identify the person (or persons)? or
      • Do I have information that will help locate the benefits? |

6.5.8 If in doubt, always report concerns to the MLRO.
Some examples

Example 1 – Shoplifting

Example 2 – Overpaid invoices

Some customers of your client have overpaid their invoices. The client retains overpayments and credits them to the profit and loss account.

Example 3 – Illegal dividends

Your client has paid a dividend based on draft accounts. Subsequent adjustments reduce distributable reserves to the extent that the dividend is now illegal.

| Do not report | If there is no such suspicion. The payment of an illegal dividend is not a criminal offence under the Companies Act. |
Example 4 – Invoices lacking commercial rationale

Your client plans to expand its operations into a new country of operation. They have engaged a consultancy firm to oversee the implementation although it is not clear what the firm’s role is. Payments made to the consultancy firm are large in comparison to the services provided and some of the expenses claimed are for significant sums to meet government officials’ expenses. The country is one where corruption and facilitation payments are known to be widespread. You ask the Finance Director about the matter and he thought that such payments were acceptable in the country in question.

Money laundering offences include conduct occurring overseas which would constitute an offence if it had occurred in the UK.

Example 5 – Concerted price rises

Your client’s overseas subsidiary is one of three key suppliers of goods to a particular market in Europe. The subsidiary has recently significantly increased its prices and margins and its principal competitors have done the same. There has been press speculation that the suppliers acted in concert, but publicly they have cited increased costs of production as driving the increase. Whilst this explains part of the reason for the increase, it is not the only reason because of the increase in margins. On reviewing the accounting records, you see significant payments for consultancy services and seek an explanation. Apparently, they relate to an assessment of the impact of the price increase on the market as well as some compensation for any losses the competitors suffered on their business outside of Europe. Participating in a price fixing cartel is a criminal offence under UK law.

Example 6 – Breaches of overseas laws

You suspect that one of your client’s overseas subsidiaries has been in breach of a number of local laws. In particular, dividends have been paid to the parent company in breach of local exchange control requirements.

<table>
<tr>

Money laundering offences include conduct occurring overseas which would constitute an offence if it had occurred in the UK (carrying a custodial sentence of 12 months or more). It does not include matters which are in breach of overseas law if there is no equivalent UK offence. Any criminal offence would however be relevant to the risk assessment of the client.
Internal reports to the MLRO

6.5.9 Section 330 of POCA requires all relevant employees to make an internal SAR to their MLRO – reporting to a line manager or colleague is not enough to comply with the legislation. Someone seeking reassurance that their conclusions are reasonable can discuss their suspicions with managers or other colleagues, in line with the business’ procedures.

6.5.10 When more than one relevant employee is aware of the same reportable matter a single SAR can be submitted to the MLRO, but it should contain the names of all those making the SAR. No internal SAR should be made in the name of a relevant employee who is unaware of the existence of the internal SAR. There is no prescribed format for internal SARs to be made to an MLRO.

External reports to the NCA

6.5.11 It is the MLRO’s responsibility to decide whether the information reported internally needs to be reported to the NCA. The MLRO is also responsible for deciding:

- whether a defence against money laundering (‘DAML’) is required from law enforcement for the engagement or any aspect of it to continue (see 6.3), and
- how business with the client should be conducted while a DAML decision is awaited.

6.5.12 When deciding what to do MLROs they should consider the following questions:

- Do I know or suspect (or have reasonable grounds for either) that someone is engaged in MLTF?
- Do I think that someone involved in the activity, or in possession of the proceeds of that activity, knew or suspected that it was criminal?
- From the contents of the internal SAR, can I identify the suspect or the whereabouts of any laundered property?
- Is an application for a DAML required (see 6.3 of this guidance)?
- Do I believe, or is it reasonable for me to believe, that the contents of the internal SAR will, or may, help identify the suspect or the whereabouts of any laundered property?
- Do the reasonable excuse exemption or overseas reporting exemption apply?
- Can I provide the information essential to an external SAR (see 6.2.15 of this guidance) without disclosing information acquired in privileged circumstances? The privilege reporting exemption is limited to relevant professional advisers and is available only to members of professional bodies, such as those listed in schedule 1 of the 2017
Guidance for the Accountancy Sector

Regulations, who also meet the requirements set out in Section 330 (14) of POCA. Further guidance on the privilege reporting exemption can be found in 6.2.22 of this guidance.

6.5.13 The MLRO may want to make reasonable enquiries of other people and systems within the business. These may confirm the suspicion, but they may also eliminate it, enabling the matter to be closed without the need for a SAR.

6.5.14 There is no prescribed format for an external SAR to the NCA. Various submission methods are available. The NCA SAR Online System is the NCA’s preferred submission mechanism. It is available through the NCA website and allows businesses to make SARs in a secure online environment. The NCA accepts hard copy SARs but will not provide a reference number in response to these.

What information should be included in an external SAR?

6.5.15 Guidance can be found on the NCA Website

The following should be regarded as essential information:

- Name of reporter;
- Date of report;
- The name of the suspect or information that may help identify them. This may simply be details of the victim if their identity is known. As many details as possible should be provided to the NCA to assist with the identification of the suspect;
- Details of who else is involved, associated, and how;
- The facts regarding what is suspected and why. The ‘why’ should be explained clearly so that it can be understood without professional or specialist knowledge;
- The relevant NCA Glossary code (if applicable). This helps the NCA to identify high risk priority cases, and to analyse emerging trends;
- The whereabouts of any criminal property, or information that may help locate it, such as details of the victim; and
- The actions that the business is taking which require a DAML (see 6.3 of this guidance).

6.5.16 All external SARs should be free of jargon and written in plain English.

6.5.17 It is recommended that reporters:

- do not include confidential information not required by POCA;
- show the name of the business, individual or MLRO submitting the report only once, in the source ID field and nowhere else;
include only the names of those involved in the suspicion and not those who made the internal SAR to the MLRO; include other parties as ‘subjects’ only when the information is necessary for an understanding of the external SAR or to meet required disclosure standards; and highlight clearly any particular concerns the reporter might have about safety (whether physical, reputational or other). This information should be included in the ‘reasons for suspicion/disclosure’ field.

Confidentiality

6.5.18 A correctly made external SAR provides full immunity from action for any form of breach of confidentiality, whether it arises out of professional ethical requirements or a legal duty created by contract (e.g., a non-disclosure agreement).

6.5.19 There will be no such immunity if the external SAR is not based on knowledge or suspicion, or if it is intended to be ‘defensive’ i.e., for the purposes of regulatory compliance rather than because of a genuine suspicion.

Documenting reporting decisions

6.5.20 In order to control legal risks, it is important that adequate records of internal SARs are kept. This is usually done by the MLRO and would normally include details of:

- all internal SARs made;
- how the MLRO handled matters, including any requests for further information;
- assessments of the information provided, along with any subsequent decisions about whether or not to await developments or seek extra information;
- the rationale for deciding whether or not to make an external SAR;
- any advice given to engagement teams about continued working and any consent requests made.

These records can be simple or sophisticated, depending on the size of the business and the volume of reporting, but they always need to contain broadly the same information and be supported by the relevant working papers. They are important because they may be needed later if the MLRO or some other person is required to justify and defend their actions.

6.5.21 For the MLRO’s efficiency and ease of reference, a reporting index may be kept, and each internal SAR given a unique reference number.
Reporting and the privileged circumstances exemption

6.5.22 Section 330 (10) of POCA contains a privileged circumstance reporting exemption. Members of relevant professional bodies (which are referred to as ‘relevant professional advisers’) who know about or suspect MLTF (or have reasonable grounds for either) are not required to submit a SAR if the information came to them in privileged circumstances (i.e. during the provision of legal advice and acting in respect of litigation). In these circumstances, and as long as the information was not provided with the intention of advancing a crime, then the information must not be reported. The privileged reporting exemption only covers SARs and should not be confused with legal professional privilege, which also extends to other documentation and advice.

6.5.23 The exemption provides a defence against failure to report a SAR but does not provide any defence against the primary money laundering offences. If the proposed work of the business is such that a DAML would be required, and the client does not waive privilege, the only option would be for the business to resign from the client engagement to avoid committing a money laundering offence. Businesses in this situation should consider seeking legal advice.

6.5.24 In Section 330 (14) of POCA, relevant professional adviser is defined as an accountant, auditor or tax adviser:

• who is a member of a relevant professional body; and
• that body makes provision for:
  o testing professional competence as a condition of admission; and o imposing and maintaining professional and ethical standards for members along with sanctions for failures to comply.

However, there is no list of the professional bodies that meet these criteria. If businesses are in any doubt about whether these provisions apply to them, they should consult their own professional body or seek legal advice.

6.5.25 Whether or not the privilege reporting exemption applies to a given situation is a matter for careful consideration. The business may have been providing the client with a variety of services, not all of which would create the circumstances required for the exemption. Consequently, it is strongly recommended that careful records are kept about the provenance of the information under consideration when decisions of this kind are being made. Legal advice may be needed.
6.5.26 Set out below are some examples of work which may fall within privileged circumstances.

| Advice on tax law to assist a client in understanding their tax position; | Assisting a client by taking witness statements from him or from third parties in respect of litigation; |
| Advice on the legal aspects of a take-over bid; | Representing a client, as permitted, at a tax tribunal; |
| Advice on duties of directors under the Companies Act; | and |
| Advice to directors on legal issues relating to the Insolvency Act 1986; and | When instructed as an expert witness by a solicitor on behalf of a client in respect of litigation. |
| Advice on employment law. | |

For further guidance on when privileged circumstances may apply to tax work please see the appendix for tax practitioners.

6.5.27 Audit work, book-keeping, preparation of accounts or tax compliance assignments are unlikely to take place in privileged circumstances.

Discussion with the MLRO

6.5.28 Given the complexity of these matters – as well as the need for a considered and consistent approach to all decisions, supported by adequate documentation – it is recommended that they are always discussed with the MLRO.

6.5.29 Where the purpose of these discussions is to obtain advice on making a disclosure under Section 330 of POCA they do not affect the applicability of the privilege reporting exemption.

6.5.30 Anyone making an internal SAR is entitled to seek advice from an appropriate specialist (either a person within the business who falls within requirements of Section 330 (7B) of POCA or an external adviser who is similarly entitled to apply the privilege reporting exemption) without affecting the applicability of the privilege reporting exemption.

The crime/fraud exception

6.5.31 Communications that would otherwise qualify for the privilege reporting exemption are excluded from it when they are intended to facilitate or guide someone in committing or advancing some crime or fraud. This is usually the client but could be a third party. An example of such a situation could be where a person seeks tax advice ostensibly to regularise their tax affairs but in reality, to help them evade tax by improving their understanding of the issues.

6.5.32 Someone worried that they may be guilty of tax evasion can still seek legal advice from a tax adviser without fear of the exception being invoked. This remains true even when, having received the advice, the person declines a business relationship and the business never knows if the irregularities were rectified. However, if that person’s behaviour leads the business to suspect the advice has been used to further evasion, then a SAR could be required.

6.5.33 Whether privileged circumstances apply in a given situation is a difficult question with a fundamentally legal answer. Businesses are strongly recommended to seek the advice of a professional legal adviser experienced in these matters.

6.6 What is a DAML and why is it important?

6.6.1 When preparing to make a SAR the MLRO must consider carefully whether the business would commit a money laundering offence if it continued to act as it intends (usually as instructed by the client). In such cases the NCA may, in certain circumstances, provide a Defence Against Money Laundering (DAML) for the activity in question.

Matters requiring a DAML

6.6.2 Before applying for a DAML it is important to consider whether the NCA is in fact able to grant one for the activity in question. The NCA’s powers in this regard are strictly limited to activities that would otherwise be offences under Sections 327, 328 or 329 of POCA (see Chapter 2). A DAML cannot be given for other POCA offences, such as tipping off (Section 333A of POCA) or prejudicing an investigation (Section 342 of POCA), or for any offence under any other law.

6.6.3 When in doubt MLROs should seek advice from the helpline provided by their supervisory body, or else seek legal advice. The NCA will say if something falls outside its powers, but it is not in a position to provide advice about whether or not a DAML is required in any given situation.

6.6.4 Common situations in which a DAML may be required include:

- acting as an insolvency officeholder when there is knowledge or a suspicion that either:
  - all or some assets in the insolvency are criminal property; or
  - the insolvent entity may enter into, or become concerned in, an arrangement under Section 328 of POCA;
- designing and implementing trust or company structures (including acting as trustee or company officer) when a suspicion arises that the client is, or will be, using them to launder money;
- acting on behalf of a client in the negotiation or implementation of a transaction (such as a corporate acquisition) in which there is an element of criminal property being bought or sold by the client;
- handling through client accounts money that is suspected of being criminal in origin;
• providing outsourced business processing services to clients when the money is suspected of having criminal origins.

Applying for and receiving a DAML

6.6.5 A DAML may only be sought on the basis of a SAR made under the provisions of Section 338 of POCA (authorised disclosures). The ‘consent required’ option should be selected to alert the NCA and enable it to prioritise the request.

6.6.6 The request should clearly state the reasons underlying the knowledge or suspicion that has given rise to the SAR, as well as the activity in question and the nature of the DAML required. Great care is needed to make sure the DAML will cover the nature and extent of the intended activity. It should make clear to the NCA exactly what is being requested. Too narrow a DAML request could mean repeated subsequent requests are needed, adding cost, creating inefficiency and possibly harming service quality. Too broad or poorly-defined a DAML request, on the other hand, could result in the request being refused by the NCA or deemed invalid for not showing clearly which activities would otherwise be offences under Section 327-329 of POCA.

6.6.7 If no refusal has been received within the seven working days following the day of submission (this is the notice period) a DAML is deemed to have been given and the activity in question can proceed.

6.6.8 For the best chance of a quick response, any critical timings should be explained clearly, and a complex report should always begin with a summary covering the key facts and the nature of the request.

When a DAML is refused

6.6.9 If a DAML is refused during the notice period, a further 31 days must pass (starting with the day of refusal) before the activity can continue. This is called the moratorium period. This period can be extended by court order in 31 day increments up to a maximum of 186 days.

6.6.10 It is possible that during either the notice or moratorium periods some law enforcement action (e.g. confiscation) will be taken.

6.6.11 If law enforcement takes no restraining action during the moratorium period, the activity can proceed as originally planned at the end of the moratorium period, however businesses may wish to seek legal advice.
When a DAML is neither granted nor refused

6.6.12 There have been concerns on the part of law enforcement about granting a DAML, in that it could be considered to condone actions which would otherwise be criminal. A refusal to grant a defence would ordinarily be followed by action to freeze and seize the assets. However, not all criminal activities are the subject of current investigations, or the time required to gather evidence to seize the assets may be insufficient even with the extension to the time period made by the Criminal Finances Act. Additionally, certain areas of law may currently be under review.

6.6.13 The NCA therefore introduced a third category of response in addition to the grant or refusal of the defence. In certain cases, the response will be that the NCA neither grants nor refuses the request for a DAML. Where a response to this effect is received, the deemed DAML provisions (see below) in POCA will apply after the expiry of 8 working days from submission of a valid request. However, Businesses should consider carefully whether they wish to proceed with an activity which is thereby flagged to them as being of concern. Businesses may wish to consider their ethical obligations and consult with their supervisor or legal advisers before proceeding.

Continuation of work while awaiting a DAML decision

6.6.14 Once a DAML request has been made, the activity in question must cease unless and until:

- a DAML has been received; or
- the notice period has expired; or
- the DAML having been refused during the notice period, the moratorium period has now expired.

To do otherwise is to risk prosecution for a money laundering offence.

6.6.15 If no deliverables are provided until after a DAML has been obtained it may be acceptable to continue working. Care is needed to make sure the work does not constitute a money laundering offence, particularly involvement in an arrangement under Section 328 of POCA or some other breach of legal or ethical requirements.

6.6.16 In some situations, it can be extremely difficult to explain why activity has had to be halted unexpectedly. Conversations with the client should be kept to a minimum. When informing clients or anyone else about such delays the business must consider the risk of tipping off or prejudicing an investigation and may wish to seek legal advice.
6.7 What should happen after an external SAR has been made?

Client relationships

6.7.1 After a SAR has been submitted the business need not stop working unless a DAML has been requested (see 6.6 of this guidance). The activity in question must not go ahead when a DAML has been sought but refused.

6.7.2 Even when a DAML is not required, if a SAR involves a client or their close associate the business may wish to consider whether the suspicion is such that for professional or commercial reasons it no longer wishes to act for them.

6.7.3 Particular challenges may arise out of the requirement for auditors to file resignation statements at Companies House. Businesses should consider these carefully to make sure that statutory and professional duties are met without including information that could constitute tipping off. There is no legal mechanism for obtaining NCA clearance for these statements or any other documents that might relate to a resignation. In complex cases a business may want to discuss the matter with the NCA or other law enforcement agency (to understand the law enforcement perspective). Document the discussions carefully. At times, MLROs may also need this kind of advice to help them formulate instructions for the wider business.

Data protection including subject access requests

6.7.4 Under the Data Protection Act 2018 businesses need not comply with data subject access requests that are likely to prejudice the prevention or detection of crime, or the capture or conviction of offenders. Similarly, personal data that relates to knowledge or suspicion of MLTF (i.e., data that has been processed to help prevent or detect crime) need not be disclosed under a subject access request if to do so would constitute tipping off. Both of these exceptions apply to the personal data likely to be contained in records relating to internal MLTF reports and SARs.

6.7.5 Data exempt from one subject access request may no longer be exempt at the time of a subsequent request (perhaps because the original suspicion has by then been proved false). When a business receives a data subject access request covering personal data in its possession, it should always consider whether the exception applies to that specific request regardless of any history of previous requests relating to the same data. These deliberations will usually involve the MLRO and the data protection officer. The thinking behind any decision to disclose the existence of a SAR should be documented.
Production orders, further information orders and other requests for information

6.7.6 The NCA or other law enforcement authority may seek further information about a SAR (usually via the MLRO). Businesses should have in place systems to enable a full and rapid response to such enquiries, and any enquiries from law enforcement regarding a business relationship. It is recommended that the enquirer’s identity is formally verified before a response is provided. This can most easily be done by noting the caller’s name and agency/force and then calling them back through their main switchboard. The NCA have a contact centre for such purposes.

6.7.7 To the extent that the request is simply to clarify the contents of a SAR, a response can be given without further formalities.

6.7.8 If a request is received from the NCA other than in relation to a SAR, or from a source other than the NCA, then it is recommended that any further disclosure should normally be made only in response to the exercise of a statutory power to obtain information (as contained in the relevant legislation) or in line with professional guidance on confidentiality and disclosures in the public interest. This approach is not intended to be uncooperative or obstructive. However, insisting on compulsion will protect the business against accusations of breach of confidentiality. When the business is compelled in this way, client or other third-party consent is not required, but nor should it be sought because of the risk of tipping off.

6.7.9 Before responding to an order to produce information, businesses should make sure that they understand:

- the authority under which the request is being made;
- the extent of the information requested;
- the timetable and mechanism for providing the information; and
- what parts of the information should be excluded (i.e., because they are subject to legal privilege)?

6.7.10 If in any doubt seek legal advice and keep records of how the issues were judged.

Crime and Courts Act 2013 – disclosure of information to NCA

6.7.11 In addition to production orders, Section 7 Crime and Courts Act 2013 creates “information gateways”. The provision permits (but does not necessarily compel or require) a disclosure to be made to the NCA if the purpose of the disclosure is for the exercise of any NCA function. You may seek clarification from the NCA officer as to which function the request relates. If disclosure is permitted under the section, the person disclosing the information (subject to certain exclusions for those who work for the Security Services or similar) does not breach confidentiality obligations or any other restriction on the disclosure of information however imposed.

6.7.12 There may be instances where a business is asked to make a disclosure under this provision. Typically, this may be as a follow up to a SAR. Circumstances for each business differ and it is recognised that the absence of a requirement to disclose the information can cause concerns. If there are such concerns, the business may either seek appropriate legal advice or request a production order.

Requests arising from a change of professional advisor (professional enquiries)

Requests regarding CDD information

6.7.13 In this situation the disclosure request can be made under regulation 39 of the 2017 Regulations (which covers reliance), or else the new adviser may simply want copies of identification evidence to help in its own identification procedures.

6.7.14 Businesses should not release confidential information without the client's consent. If reliance is being placed on another business (see 5.3 of this guidance) then Chapter Seven of this guidance (on record keeping) should be consulted.

Requests for information regarding suspicious activity

6.7.15 It is recommended that these requests are declined. The risk of tipping off greatly restricts the ability to make disclosures of this type.

6.7.16 Accountants who are relevant professional advisers are reminded that they do not commit a tipping off offence if they share information with another accountant of similar standing provided the information satisfies all of the following:

- it relates to the same client or former client of both advisers;
- it covers a transaction or provision of services that involved both of them;
- it was disclosed only for the purpose of preventing a money laundering offence;
- it was disclosed to a person in an EU member state or another state which imposes equivalent anti-money laundering requirements.

Reporting to other bodies

6.7.17 Businesses should have regard to their other obligations, such as their reporting responsibilities under the International Auditing Standards, statutory regulatory returns, or the reporting of misconduct by fellow members of a professional body. In all these cases the risk of tipping off must be considered and the offence avoided. Accountants may wish to contact their professional body for advice, or else seek legal advice.

6.7.18 A tipping off offence is not committed under Section 333A of POCA, if the person did not know or suspect that they were likely to prejudice any subsequent investigation. Situations in which this defence can apply include:

- reporting to your own professional body if it is an anti-money laundering supervisory authority (Section 333D of POCA);
- reporting a matter of material significance to the UK charity regulators: Charities Commission for England and Wales, Office of the Scottish Charity Regulator and Charity Commission for Northern Ireland
7 RECORD KEEPING

- Why may existing document retention policies need to be changed?
- What should be considered regarding retention policies?
- What considerations apply to SARs and consent requests?
- What considerations apply to training records?
- Where should reporting records be located?
- What do businesses need to do regarding third-party arrangements?
- What are the requirements regarding the deletion of personal data?

7.1 Why may existing document retention policies need to be changed?

7.1.1 Records relating to CDD and the business relationship must be kept for five years from the end of the client relationship.

7.1.2 All records related to an occasional transaction must be retained for five years after the date of the transaction.

7.1.3 Unless there is a basis for retaining records beyond this period they must be destroyed.

7.1.4 The 2017 Regulations do not specify the medium in which records should be kept, but they must be readily retrievable.

7.2 What should be considered regarding retention policies?

7.2.1 Businesses must be aware of the interaction of MLTF laws and regulations with the requirements of the Data Protection Regime. The Data Protection Regime requires that personal information be subject to appropriate security measures and retained for no longer than necessary for the purpose for which it was originally acquired. See 6.7.4 of this guidance.

7.3 What considerations apply to SARs and DAML requests?

7.3.1 No retention period is officially specified for records relating to:

- internal reports;
- the MLRO’s consideration of internal reports;
- any subsequent reporting decisions;
- issues connected to DAMLs, production of documents and similar matters;
• suspicious activity reports and consent requests sent to the NCA, or its responses.

7.3.2 These records can form the basis of a defence against accusations of failing to carry out duties under POCA and the 2017 regulations. Businesses should consider their retention policies taking into account both data protection and the potential for law enforcement contact.

7.4 What considerations apply to training records?

7.4.1 Businesses must demonstrate their compliance with regulations that place a legal obligation on them to make sure that certain of their relevant employees and agents are, (a) aware of the law relating to MLTF, and (b) trained regularly in how to recognise and deal with transactions and other events which may be related to MLTF.

7.4.2 These records should show the training that was given, the dates on which it was given, which individuals received the training and the results from any assessments.

7.5 Where should reporting records be located?

7.5.1 Records related to internal and external SARs of suspicious activity are not part of the working papers relating to client assignments. They should be stored separately and securely as a safeguard against tipping off and inadvertent disclosure to someone making routine use of client working papers.

7.6 What do businesses need to do regarding third-party arrangements?

7.6.1 A business may arrange for another organisation to perform some of its AML related activities – CDD or training, for example. In which case, it must also ensure that the other party’s record keeping procedures are good enough to demonstrate compliance with the MLTF obligations, or else it must obtain and store copies of the records for itself. It must also consider how it would obtain its records from the other party should they be needed, as well as what would happen to them if the other party ceased trading.

7.7 What are the requirements regarding the deletion of personal data?

7.7.1 Under Regulation 40 of the 2017 Regulations, once the periods specified in 7.1 of this guidance have expired, the business must delete any personal data unless:

• The business is required to retain it under statutory obligation, or
• the business is required to retain it for legal proceedings, or
• the data subject has consented to the retention and the consent has been given in accordance with the GDPR.
8 TRAINING AND AWARENESS

- Who should be trained and who is responsible for it?
- What should be included in the training?
- When should training be completed?

8.1 Who should be trained and who is responsible for it?

8.1.1 The regulations require that all relevant employees and agents involved in the provision of defined services be made aware of MLTF law and be trained regularly to recognise and deal with transactions, and other activities and situations, which may be related to MLTF, as well as to identify and report anything that gives grounds for suspicion (see Chapter six of this guidance).

8.1.2 Training must be provided to relevant employees and agents. The nature and extent of the training will depend on the nature of the relationship with that person and the work that the person is carrying out. In some cases, the agent may already have undertaken relevant training. Businesses may rely on evidence of this training provided by the agent.

8.1.3 Thought should be given to who else might need AML training. While comprehensive training may be needed for relevant employees and agents, it may be sufficient to ensure that others (such as non-client facing personnel) have some understanding and awareness of these MLTF aspects.

8.1.4 A designated person should be made responsible for the detail of AML training. This could be the MLRO or a member of senior management. There should be a mechanism to ensure that relevant employees and agents have completed their AML training.

8.1.5 Someone accused of a failure-to-disclose offence has a defence if:

- they did not know or suspect that someone was engaged in money laundering even though they should have; but
- their employer had failed to provide them with the appropriate training.

8.1.6 This defence – that the relevant employee or agent did not receive the required AML training – is likely to put the business at risk of prosecution for a regulatory breach.

8.2 Who is an agent?

8.2.1 Agents include any person who, whilst not an employee of the business, is engaged to carry out work or provide services on its behalf. In general, an agent is likely to carry out such work or services under the supervision of the business. The work or services will be closely integrated with those carried out by the business itself. The agent will frequently be working closely with employees of the business.

8.2.2 Agents for this purpose do not include a person of independent standing who acts for or on behalf of a business to provide a defined service. This may include an independent legal adviser or a professional services firm overseas. Typically, the business will not supervise the provision of such services and the third party will work independently to deliver the agreed services. Such services may form part of the output to be delivered by the business to its client.

8.3 What should be included in the training?

8.3.1 Training can be delivered in several different ways: face-to-face, self-study, e-learning, video presentations, or a combination of all of them.

8.3.2 The programme itself should include:

• An explanation of the law within the context of the business’s own commercial activities;

• the requirement to carry out CDD and conduct ongoing monitoring, including how to carry out CDD, the purpose of CDD and how to use the information gathered in providing defined services;

• when it is appropriate to make an internal report to the business’s MLRO and how to do so;

• so-called ‘red flags’ of which relevant employees and agents should be aware when conducting business, which would cover all aspects of the MLTF procedures,

• how to deal with client activity and other situations that might be related to MLTF (including how to use internal reporting systems), the business’s expectations of confidentiality, and how to avoid tipping off (see Section six of this guidance); and

• The relevant data protection requirements

8.3.3 Where appropriate, training programmes should be tailored to each business area and cover the business’s procedures so that relevant employees and agents understand the MLTF risks posed by the specific services they provide and types of client with which they deal. Relevant employees and agents should be able to appreciate, on a case-by-case basis, the approach they should be taking. Furthermore, businesses should aim to create an AML culture in which relevant employees and agents are always alert to the risks of MLTF and habitually adopt a risk-based approach to CDD.

8.3.4 Records should be kept showing who has received training, the training received and when training took place (see 7.4 of this guidance). These records should be used to assist in the recognition of when additional training is needed – e.g. when the MLTF risk of a specific business area changes, or when the role of a relevant employee or agent changes.
8.3.5 A system of tests, or some other way of confirming the effectiveness of the training, should be considered.

8.3.6 The overall objective of training is not for relevant employees or agents to develop a specialist knowledge of criminal law. However, they should be able to apply a level of knowledge that would reasonably be expected of someone in their role and with their experience, particularly when deciding whether to make an internal SAR to the MLRO.
8.4 When should training be completed?

8.4.1 Businesses need to make sure that new relevant employees and agents are trained promptly.

8.4.2 The frequency of training events can be influenced by changes in legislation, regulation, professional guidance, case law and judicial findings (both domestic and international), the business’ risk profile, procedures, and service lines.

8.4.3 It may not be necessary to repeat a complete training programme regularly, but it may be appropriate to provide relevant employees and agents with concise updates to help refresh and expand their knowledge and to remind them how important effective anti-money laundering work is.

8.4.4 In addition to training, businesses are encouraged to mount periodic MLTF awareness campaigns to keep relevant employees and agents alert to individual and firm-wide responsibilities.

_Tipping off_ A money laundering-related offence for the regulated sector, defined under s333A-D, POCA.

_UK AML Regime_ UK anti-money laundering and terrorist financing regime
A secondee is an individual employed by one organisation (the seconding business) but acting as an employee of another (the receiving business) i.e. they are operating under the supervision and direction of the receiving business and the seconding business has no responsibility for the work or activities that the secondee undertakes during the course of their secondment.

The formal terms of a secondment should make clear to all concerned how the obligations imposed by the UK AML regime will be applied. For example, if the secondee is seconded to a business that is not subject to the requirements of the 2017 Regulations then it will be unlikely that the secondee will be subject to any AML obligations unless the receiving business has decided to implement an AML policy voluntarily. However, if the receiving business is subject to the requirements of the 2017 Regulations then the secondee will need to adhere to the AML obligations as set out by the receiving business. Such obligations would include the reporting of any knowledge or suspicion of MLTF identified during the course of the secondment, but a report should only be made to the receiving business’s MLRO. Upon rejoining the seconding business, there is no requirement for the secondee to submit a suspicious activity report to the seconding business’s MLRO about any knowledge or suspicion of MLTF that came to their attention during the course of their secondment.

Reporting obligation when temporarily or permanently working outside the UK for a business

There will be situations where a relevant employee (or agent) is providing defined services and as a result of providing those services they are required to work temporarily outside of the UK. In such cases, where knowledge or suspicion of MLTF comes to such a relevant employee, they must still report their suspicion to their UK MLRO. For example, a business provides accountancy services to a UK private company. As part of the engagement the relevant employee is required to spend time at the company’s subsidiary in Rotterdam. While working in Rotterdam the relevant employee is informed about a fraud committed by a supplier. As the information leads the relevant employee to form a suspicion of MLTF they must submit a SAR to their MLRO.

There may be other situations where a relevant employee works permanently outside the UK for a UK business. In such cases a business should consider whether the relevant employee is working at a separate business or at a branch office of a UK business. Concluding on such matters can be difficult and therefore a business may wish to take legal advice in relation to the need for their relevant employee to comply with the UK’s money laundering reporting regime as well as any local legal requirements.
9.3 APPENDIX B: CLIENT VERIFICATION

Documentation purporting to offer evidence of identity may emanate from a number of sources. These documents differ in their integrity, reliability and independence. Some are issued after due diligence on an individual’s identity has been undertaken; others are issued on request, without any such checks being carried out. There is a broad hierarchy of documents:

- certain documents issued by government departments and agencies, or by a court; then
- certain documents issued by other public sector bodies or local authorities; then
- certain documents issued by regulated firms in the financial services sector; then
- those issued by other firms subject to the Regulations, or to equivalent legislation; then
- those issued by other organisations including providers of electronic identification services.

B.1 Individuals

Client identification:

The full name, date of birth and residential address should be obtained.

Client Verification:

A document issued by an official (e.g., government) body is deemed to be independent and reliable source even if provided by the client. The original, or an acceptably certified copy of a document should be seen, and a copy retained. The document should be valid and recent. Documents, including documents sourced online, should not be accepted if there is any suspicion regarding their provenance.

For information obtained from an electronic identification process to be regarded as reliable, the process must be secure from fraud and misuse and capable of providing an appropriate level of assurance that the person claiming a particular identity, is in fact the person with that identity.

The following is a suggested non-exhaustive list of sources of evidence for individuals:

- valid passport
- valid photo card driving licence
- national Identity card (non-UK nationals)
- identity card issued by the Electoral Office for Northern Ireland
- A check provided via an electronic identification process that meets the criteria to be relied upon.
Where there is an increased risk specifically relating to the identity of the individual, it may be appropriate to request additional, supplementary documents, for example:

- Recent evidence of entitlement to a state- or local authority-funded benefit (including housing benefit, council tax benefit, tax credits, state pension, educational or other grant).
- Instrument of a court appointment (such as a grant of probate).
- Current council tax demand letter or statement.
- HMRC-issued tax notification (NB: employer-issued documents such as P60s are not acceptable).
- End of year tax deduction certificates/ tax year overview issued by HMRC.
- Current bank statements or credit/debit card statements.
- Current utility bills
- A check provided via an electronic identification process that meets the criteria to be relied upon.

Source of wealth and source of funds

B.1.2 Where appropriate, evidence can be obtained from searching public information sources like the internet, company registers and land registers.

B.1.3 If the client’s funds/wealth have been derived from, say, employment, property sales, investment sales, inheritance or divorce settlements, then it may be appropriate to obtain documentary proof.

B.2 Private companies/LLPs

B.2.1 The following information must be obtained and verified:

- full name of company/LLP
- registered number
- registered office address and, if different, principal place of business

The business must take reasonable measures to determine and verify the following:

- the law to which the company/LLP is subject
- its constitution (for example via governing documents)
- any shareholders/members who ultimately own or control more than 25% of the shares or voting rights (directly or indirectly including bearer shares), or any individual who otherwise exercises control over management. These individuals are the beneficial owners.
• The identity of any agent or intermediary purporting to act on behalf of the entity and their authorisation to act e.g., where a lawyer engages on behalf of an underlying client.
• the full names of all directors (or equivalent) and senior persons responsible for the operations of the company.

B.2.3 Beneficial owners should be verified on a risk-based approach, so for higher risk clients, more verification work should be performed. If the business has exhausted all possible means of identifying the beneficial owner of the company/LLP, the business must take reasonable measures to verify the identity of the senior person in the company/LLP who is responsible for managing it, and keep records in writing of all the actions they have taken and difficulties they have encountered.

B.2.4 The names of directors should be verified on a risk-based approach, so more verification work should be performed for higher risk clients. The business should assess which directors require identity verification (see below). The subsequent work should include verifying both the director’s name and their identity – i.e. that they are who they say they are.

B.2.5 When applying a risk-based approach to verification of directors, the business should assess the overall client risk (see Chapter Four) by considering the following:
• The type of client;
• the country or geographic areas in which it operates;
• the product or service being provided;
• the delivery channel being used.

For a normal risk client, the business should verify the identity of the director who is the key client contact. Verification of additional directors should be considered for high-risk clients.

When undertaking verification of director identity, businesses should consider the risk of identity theft and the use of false documents. Businesses must be able to explain how they have applied a risk-based approach to the verification of directors and ensure that the rationale is documented.

B.2.6 Businesses should take care when using information relating to directors held on company registers – these are populated by the company and could contain unintentional or deliberate errors. For this reason, company registers of people with significant control may be used as a source of information and verification but not solely relied upon. Since the purpose of client verification is to check the client identity information already gathered, it is important that the information used at this stage is drawn from independent sources (such as government issued identity documents) and any identity evidence used should be from an authoritative source. Businesses may wish to use electronic verification methods (see chapter five of this guidance).
B.3 Listed or regulated entity

Client identification

B.3.1 The following information should be obtained:
- full name
- membership or registration number
- address

Client verification

One of the following documents should be seen and a copy retained:
- a printout from the website of the relevant regulator or exchange (which should be annotated);
- written confirmation of the entity’s regulatory or listing status from the regulator or exchange.

B4. Government or similar bodies

Client identification

B.4.1 The following information should be obtained:
- full name of the body
- main place of operation
- government or supra-national agency which controls it

Client verification

One of the following documents should be seen and a copy retained:
- a printout from the website of the relevant body (which should be annotated).

Additionally, for housing associations
- the printout must contain its registered number, registered company number (where appropriate) and registered address.

9.6 APPENDIX E: client due diligence case studies

The following case studies are illustrative. Each CDD situation should be analysed on its own merit.

If a situation changes, for example, if you have already conducted CDD on a client and then another individual or entity in its ownership structure becomes a client, you should conduct CDD from scratch for the new client, although you may use the evidence that you have already collected. For example, if a client is a company that is owned by a trust, Regulation 5(1) must be used to identify the BOs of the company. If subsequently the trust becomes a client, Regulation 6(1) must be used to identify the BOs of the trust.

Case study 1 – Body Corporate - Company

The client is Company A Ltd, a private company. Unless persons F or G exercise the relevant control through other means (such as through 25% voting rights or other means of control) and based on a 25% ownership threshold, the BOs are the individuals D and E.

In determining the BO position, we would need to understand the structure of Companies B & C (also private companies), but they do not meet the definition of a BO as they are not natural persons.

Individual D: is a beneficial owner due to an indirect shareholding of 30% through Company B.

Individual E: is a beneficial owner due to an indirect shareholding of 30% through Companies B and C.

Individuals F & G are not beneficial owners as they only own 20% each through Company C.
The client is Company A Ltd, a private company. Based on a 25% threshold, the BOs are the individuals G, H and J.

In determining the BO position, we would need to understand the structure of Company C, Partnership D, Pension Fund E and Company F but they do not meet the definition of a BO as they are not natural persons.

Individuals H and J are beneficial owners based on a 25% threshold due to their indirect shareholding of 33% each via Partnership D.

Individual G is a beneficial owner because, although they own only 1% of Partnership D (and thus 1% of Company A) they control Company A through their control of Partnership D.

Whilst not BOs in their own right, Pension Fund E and Company F present avenues of ownership and control that should be considered further. Pension Fund E has a 33% ownership interest in Company A. Company F, as General Partner, controls the operations of Partnership D (which owns 100% of Company A). In some situations, pension schemes and banks may qualify for Simplified Due Diligence (SDD), in which case consideration will stop at the point that we can confirm they are eligible for such treatment. Depending on the risk assessment we may need to further investigate the ownership and control structure to ensure there are no further BOs.
The client (Company A Ltd) is a body corporate, therefore there is no need to use the BO rules related to other types of client, such as trusts.

In our case, all of the shares in Company A have equal voting rights. 80% of them are owned by Discretionary Trust E, which allows Discretionary trust E to control the activities of Company A. The remaining shares are owned by employees of Company A, none of whom have any connection to anyone else in the ownership and control structure.

Discretionary trust E is not a natural person, so it cannot be a BO.

The activities of Discretionary trust E are controlled by its trustees (M). Thus, each trustee is a BO of Company A.
In our case, the trust’s protector (K) is capable of exercising veto power over the trustees and is responsible for appointing new trustees. They are therefore regarded as having control of Discretionary Trust E and, therefore, of Company A. Protector K is a BO of Company A.

In our case the settlor (L) has no involvement following the settlement of assets into the trust, nor do they exercise control over the trustees or the protector. L has no other connection to A. L is not a BO of Company A, since they will not be exercising control over E.

The employee-shareholders do not have enough votes, acting either individually or together, to control Company A. None of them is a BO of Company A.

Although the trustees and the protector must act in the interest of the beneficiaries, they (N) have no authority over the trustees or protector. Because they have no specified interest in Trust E and, therefore, in the capital of Company A, the beneficiaries (N) cannot be BOs, unless they have control over A in some other way.

Notes:

- Although there is no requirement to:
  - identify or verify the settlor, there may be situations where, on a risk-sensitive basis, it may be appropriate to know the identity of person L, for example where there is concern that the trust’s interest may have been acquired with the proceeds of crime.
  - identify the class of beneficiaries of trust E or even individuals receiving distributions from the trust, there may be situations where, on a risk-sensitive basis, it may be appropriate to identify the class or distribution-receiving beneficiaries, for example where distributions from A appear excessive. The reasons for large distributions may be unexceptional, for example where a beneficiary is paying for a wedding or large medical bills.
Case Study 4 – Dilute Ownership

We are approached by a potential new client, A & Daughter Ltd. The company was established in 1864 by Josiah A. The ownership of the company has passed down through the family. Now on the sixth and seventh generations, the share ownership is widely dispersed amongst remote descendants of Josiah.

There is only one class of shares and all have equal entitlement to profits, capital and votes. Our initial procedures indicate that no one owns more than 5% of the shares.

Our starting point is that there are no BOs – no one controls the company.

This will only change if we have reason to believe otherwise. If we have reason to believe that there may be one or more BO, it may be appropriate to consider arrangements made by the articles of association of the company, by contract, by informal family agreement or by some other means. We would then consider:

• Does anyone have the right, directly or indirectly, to appoint a majority of the board, whether they exercise it?

• Does anyone have the right to exercise a dominant or significant influence over the company, whether they exercise it?

• Is anyone acting as a nominee or proxy for someone else? For example, an uncle may hold proxies for one or more infant nephews and nieces, or shareholders may have secretly sold their interests to a third party (possibly to evade restrictions that require owners to be family members)?

• Does anyone otherwise exercise control over the company, even if this is not based on a right? This may be because of a strong personality or family position.

There are three possible outcomes from these considerations:

1. There are no BOs.

2. There are one or more individuals who we have identify as BOs, because they have the right to control or effectively control the company.

3. We cannot rule out that there are not BOs and, therefore, we must apply Regulation 28(6), (7) and (8), as illustrated in Case Study 11.
Case Study 5 – Body Corporate - Limited Liability Partnership (LLP)

The client is an LLP, a Limited Liability Partnership of two private companies B Ltd and C Ltd.

Unless individual F exercises the relevant control through other means (such as through more than 25% voting rights or other means of control) and based on a 25% ownership threshold, the BOs are persons E, G and H.

In determining the BO position, we would need to understand the Structure of Companies B, C, D and P (all private companies), but they do not meet the definition of a BO as they are not natural persons.

Individual E is a BO due to an indirect shareholding of 26% through Companies B and D.

Individual F is not a BO due to their indirect shareholding only being 3%.

Individual G is a BO due to an indirect shareholding of 34.5% through Companies B, C, D and P.

Individual H is a BO due to an indirect shareholding of 36.5% through Companies B, C, D and P.
Partnerships

Regulation 5(3)
In these Regulations, “beneficial owner”, in relation to a partnership (other than a limited liability partnership), means any individual who—
(a) ultimately is entitled to or controls (in each case whether directly or indirectly) more than 25% share of the capital or profits of the partnership or more than 25% of the voting rights in the partnership;
(b) satisfies one or more the conditions set out in Part 1 of Schedule 1 to the Scottish Partnerships (Register of People with Significant Control) Regulations 2017 (references to people with significant control over an eligible Scottish partnership) (32); or
(c) otherwise exercises ultimate control over the management of the partnership.

Case Study 6 – Partnership - Limited Partnership (LP)

The client is A LP, a Limited Partnership of two private companies B Ltd and C Ltd.

In determining the BO position, we would need to understand the structure of Companies B & C (private companies), but they do not meet the definition of a BO as they are not natural persons.

Company C Ltd is the General Partner. It has day-to-day responsibility for the operations of Partnership A LP.

Company B Ltd is a limited partner. It may not take part in the day-to-day management of A LP.

Individual D is a BO. Although they only benefit from 1% of A LP, they have control of C Ltd, which controls A LP.

Individual E is a BO due to an indirect shareholding of 40% through Company B.
Individual F is not a BO due to their indirect interest in capital and profits being only 24.75%.

Individual G is not a BO due to their indirect interest in capital and profits being only 20%.
Case Study 7 – Partnerships other than LLPs and LPs

The client is partnership A. It has equity partners, revenue partners and salaried partners.

Individual B is a BO because of an interest in the capital of more than 25%.

Individual C is a BO because of an interest in the profits of more than 25%.

Individuals C and D are BOs because of voting interests of more than 25%.

Individuals F and G are not BOs – their interests do not exceed the 25% threshold.
Case Study 8 – Trusts

Regulation 6(1)
In these Regulations, “beneficial owner”, in relation to a trust, means each of the following—
(a) the settlor;
(b) the trustees;
(c) the beneficiaries;
(d) where the individuals (or some of the individuals) benefiting from the trust have not been determined, the class of persons in whose main interest the trust is set up, or operates;
(e) any individual who has control over the trust.

The client is trust A. It was created by individual S for the benefit of his 12-year old daughter B and her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren. S appointed some friends as trustees and his wife as a protector (with power to replace trustees and veto their decisions).

Individual B is a BO as a beneficiary.

Individuals D do not exist. The class of beneficiaries is a BO, they must be identified as a class “The children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of B”.

Individual S is a BO as the settlor.

The individuals T are BOs as trustees.

Individual P is a BO because she has control over the trust.
Note:
As children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren are born and receive distributions, they must be identified.

In the case of corporate trustees, settlors and beneficiaries, consideration should be given to the beneficial ownership of the trustee, settlor or beneficiary, as appropriate, to establish if there are individuals who are BOs.
Case Study 9 – Estates of Deceased Individuals

Regulation 6(6)
In these Regulations, “beneficial owner”, in relation to an estate of a deceased person in the course of administration, means—
(a) in England and Wales and Northern Ireland, the executor, original or by representation, or administrator for the time being of a deceased person;
(b) in Scotland, the executor for the purposes of the Executors (Scotland) Act 1900.

The client is the estate of A (deceased).

Individual B is not a BO despite being the major beneficiary.

Individual D is not a BO.

Individual E is a BO as an executor.

Individual F is a BO as an executor. The fact that F is also a beneficiary does not affect their status as a BO.

In the case of corporate executors, consideration should be given to the beneficial ownership of the executor, as appropriate, to establish if there are individuals who are BOs.
Case Study 10 – Other Legal entities

Regulation 6(7)

In these Regulations, “beneficial owner”, in relation to a legal entity or legal arrangement which does not fall within regulation 5 or paragraphs (1), (3) or (6) of this regulation, means—

(a) any individual who benefits from the property of the entity or arrangement;
(b) where the individuals who benefit from the entity or arrangement have yet to be determined, the class of persons in whose main interest the entity or arrangement is set up or operates;
(c) any individual who exercises control over the property of the entity or arrangement.

Regulation 6(8)

For the purposes of paragraph (7), where an individual is the beneficial owner of a body corporate which benefits from or exercises control over the property of the entity or arrangement, the individual is to be regarded as benefiting from or exercising control over the property of the entity or arrangement.

The client is an Austrian foundation. Austrian foundations are legal entities that have no owners and no shares. A founder creates it by issuing a charter and making a gift to the new body. Founders who are individuals, rather than legal entities, can reserve the right to revoke the foundation’s existence. A board of directors consisting of at least three individuals runs the Foundation.

Cases of this type depend very much on the facts. Care must be taken that decisions make sense in all the circumstances of the case.

In this case, F has created a foundation to benefit his grandson (B) and art-related charities (C). He has appointed two prominent artists and his solicitor as directors of the foundation.
In this case, the suggested approach is to:

1. Treat the Founder (F) as a BO because of the power to revoke the foundation’s existence and hence control over its property.
2. Treat the Directors (D) as BOS because of their control over the foundation’s property.
3. Treat the named beneficiary (B) as a BO because he benefits from the property of the foundation.
4. Do not treat the charities (C) as BOSs because there is a named beneficiary.
Case Study 11 – All Other Cases

Regulation 6(9)
In these Regulations, “beneficial owner”, in any other case, means the individual who ultimately owns or controls the entity or arrangement or on whose behalf a transaction is being conducted.

The client is Tennis Club A. It is unincorporated entity (not a company, partnership, trust, estate). It has 100 to 200 members, who own two tennis courts in a local park and a changing room. The club’s activities are funded by subscriptions from the members.

The members own the club, and each has an equal interest. The members (M) elect a president (P) and a committee (C). The committee oversees the president’s actions as she runs the club on a day-to-day basis. She has been president for 10 years.

In determining BOs in cases of this type much depends on the specific facts of the case and care must be taken to look at the situation in the round, rather than concentrate on individual facets.

In this case, the suggested approach is to:

1. Treat the members (M) as BOs but as a class (as we would for an indeterminate class of beneficiaries of a trust) rather than as individuals.
2. President (P) will not be a BO unless she has effective control of the club, because she can make executive decisions with little or no challenge from the committee.
Case Study 12 – Where:

all possible means of identifying the ultimate beneficial owner of a body corporate are exhausted; or the Business is not satisfied that the individuals identified as BOs are in fact BOs of the client.

Regulation 28(6)
If the customer is a body corporate, and paragraph (7) applies, the relevant person may treat the senior person in that body corporate responsible for managing it as its beneficial owner.

Regulation 28(7)
This paragraph applies if (and only if) the relevant person has exhausted all possible means of identifying the beneficial owner of the body corporate and—
(a) has not succeeded in doing so, or
(b) is not satisfied that the individual identified is in fact the beneficial owner.

Regulation 28(8)
If paragraph (7) applies, the relevant person must:
(a) keep records in writing of all the actions it has taken to identify the beneficial owner of the body corporate; take reasonable measures to verify the identity of the senior person in the body corporate responsible for managing it, and keep records in writing of all the actions the relevant person has taken in doing so, and any difficulties the relevant person has encountered in doing so.
The client is Company A Ltd, a private company.

In determining the BO position, we would need to understand the structure of Companies B, C, D and P. They do not meet the definition of a BO as they are not natural persons.

Company B is a Brazilian company. We believe that its shareholders are E and D.

Company C is a Costa Rican company, we believe that its shareholders are H and P.

Company D is a company in the Dominican Republic. We believe its shareholders are F and G.

Company P is a Panamanian corporation. After exhausting (and documenting) all possible means of identifying the BOs, we cannot establish its ownership.

We go through the following stages.

1. Decide whether it is appropriate to file a SAR, and
2. Decide whether it is appropriate to Decline or cease to act. If it is appropriate to continue to act:
   o take reasonable steps to verify the identity of the senior person in the body corporate responsible for managing it (in this case R), and o record in writing:
     a. All the actions we have taken to identify the ultimate beneficial owner or owners.
     b. All the actions we have taken to verify the identity of the senior person, and
     c. Any difficulties that we encountered in verifying the identity of the senior person.

In this case, it would be appropriate to identify and verify individual E, who is a BO, irrespective of the ownership of Company P.
